Reich Bans Profiteering In War Goods For Italians

Hitler Helps Clear Way for Application of League Sanctions.

Attitude Likened To Policy of U. S.

Te Permit Normal Trade but Will Take No Advantage of Crisis.

The War Crisis.

The League of Nations learned that Germany will move to prevent an abnormal flow of goods to Italy.

At Paris, the Anglo-Italian Mediterranean crisis was reported solved.

Premier Mussolini ended bulk shipments of troops to the African front.

At Addis Ababa, the government claimed an Ethiopian victory at Makale, while scouts with the advancing Italian forces reported Makale occupied. In the south, two Italian planes were reported shot down.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Nov. 6.—Germany told the League of Nations tonight she will permit no war profiteering whatsoever in the Reich.

An official League communique disclosed Adolf Hitler's decision to stamp out all speculation in products Germany is convinced are destined for either Italy or Ethiopia.

League officials and many delegates saw the Reich's action as a serious blow to Mussolini. They interpreted it as meaning the non-member Reich will do nothing or permit nothing to balk Geneva's efforts to bring quick termination of the African war.

Decree Halts Speculation.

The communique said the committee of eighteen, through the League secretariat, had been informed that Germany has learned certain persons were purchasing goods in the Reich with the probable intention of selling them to belligerents at a large profit.

"The government therefore proposes shortly to issue a decree to render such speculation impossible," said the communique.

League officials believed the move would seriously embarrass Il Duce because they have felt the merchandise purchased in Germany was intended primarily for Italy, presumably by transit across Austria.

They saw in Germany's attitude a certain similarity with that of the United States, which officially has sought to discourage war profiteering. Moreover, these officials read into Hitler's decision a warning to Mussolini that he cannot count upon German support or upon an unlimited German market to supply him with the sinews of war.

Materials Bought in Germany.

Both Germans and foreigners have been purchasing materials in Germany with the apparent intention of profiting by resale to the warring nations.

Unofficial sources said they were purchased for exportation to countries other than Italy or Ethiopia, the idea being that they would reach the belligerents, mainly Italy, through these other countries.

Germany, it was understood, will adopt an attitude of neutrality similar to that of the United States. Probably she will permit a normal flow of trade to Italy and Ethiopia.

9 Are Injured In Train Crash

Last Car of Flier Derails, Hits Standing Engine at Rochester.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Nine persons were injured and 15 passengers aboard the observation car of the Empire State Express were shaken up when the car was derailed and sideswiped a locomotive standing on a neighboring track as the crack flyer pulled out of the New York Central Station at 3:45 p. m. today.

Leaving the tracks as the Buffalo-bound express was picking up speed after pulling out from the station, the observation car struck the engine.

Although it remained upright and the train was stopped almost immediately by the application of emergency brakes, the car was badly damaged.

The long train had passed over the trestle crossing the Genesee River, about a quarter-mile west of the station, and had not quite reached the bridge over State street when the rear trucks of the last car were derailed.

Invaders Repelled at Makale, 2 Planes Felled, Says Ethiopia

Ten Italians Killed, Four Seized, Addis Ababa Reports; Fascists, However, Tell of Advance Patrol's Triumphal Entry Into City.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 6.—A government communique today said Ethiopian troops repelled an Italian scouting force trying to enter Makale in the north, and that two Italian airplanes were brought down on the southern front.

Ten Italians were killed and four taken prisoner in the fighting at Makale last night, the communique said, while two Ethiopians were killed and two wounded. The Italian soldiers were operating in advance of the main force, seeking to reach Makale as the climax of its second big drive into northern Ethiopia.

The two Italian planes were shot down during fighting in the Webbe Shibeli sector in the south October 18, the government announced.

One of the planes was said to have carried many bombs, which exploded and killed the occupants. The four Italians in the other plane also were killed, the government said.

The communique stated 45 women and children were killed and seven Ethiopian warriors wounded during a raid by Italian planes on the town of Gorrahei, in southern Ethiopia, November 2. It said five of the wounded soldiers had rejoined their units.

The government announcement said Emperor Haile Selassie will decorate one of his fighters for outstanding bravery during an engagement, the site of which was not disclosed.

This warrior was left with a machine gun to protect the retreat of Ethiopians from an advance by Italians who greatly outnumbered them, the communique stated. He fired the 400 rounds that were left, then pulled out the breech of the gun (thus making it incapable of being operated) and retreated.

Mercury to Continue Downward Trend Today

Topcoats appeared in the business district and up and down the Mall yesterday as brisk November made itself felt, and the temperature achieved a maximum of only 57 degrees at 4 p. m. Yesterday's minimum of 52, at 6 p. m., made Washingtonians shiver, and autumn colds were common.

Today will be fair and slightly cooler, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Frost is expected in the suburbs this morning, and the maximum reading, the forecaster said, scarcely will exceed 55 degrees.

Nice Requests Relief Parley By Governors

He Urges Lehman to Act to Meet 'Crisis' as Federal Program Ends.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—With Federal relief abolished in many States and sharply curtailed in others so as to end December 1, Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland today requested Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York to call a meeting immediately of all Governors throughout the country to discuss the "impending relief crisis."

In a telegram to the New York Governor Gov. Nice stated:

"In sight of the ultimatum issued by Washington in the effect that all States will be taken off direct relief December 1, I urge upon you as Governor of the largest State in the country to immediately convene the Governors of all other States at some centrally located point for the purpose of discussing what I fear will prove to be a most serious, if not disastrous, situation.

"I have already appointed a committee of the strongest and most intelligent persons I can find to advise with me on this matter as it affects Maryland, but I do not think that Maryland should act other than in concert with other States of the Union.

"I regard this as one of the most vitally important and serious matters facing the American people today, and, therefore, I request you to take immediate action."

St. Louis, Nov. 6 (AP).—After testimonyq by seven Government witnesses, both sides rested today in the long-drawn-out anti-trust suit against major motion picture corporations. The jury was excused until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

A defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was expected to be presented this afternoon. The five individual and eight corporate defendants completed their testimony yeserday to conspiracy charges.

Legume Is Lashed to Victory Over Hindu Queen by a Nose

By Walter Haight,

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., Nov. 6.—Legume, the "international complication" horse, scored his second success of the meeting in the Pimlico Graded Handicap, class A, before some 8,000 customers today. The colt, by the French sire Epinard out of the Irish mare Shenanigan, ran his usual front race to bring the chief end of the purse to Breckenridge Long, United States Ambassador to Italy, and a lot of pride to Max Smart, the colored trainer.

It was by the narrowest margin, in the parlance of the turf, a nose, that Legume's victory came, and the whip of Jockey Nick Wall played no small part in his drive to triumph. At his side came a charging Hindu Queen, flying the cerise and white of the Vanderbilt Stable, and just a fraction of a nod away. Chatmoss was third in the field of six, a length and a half away from the thrilling struggle.

The day brought the second disqualification of the Maryland season. Scotch Bun, the property of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, won the race, but, with victory seemingly assured, he swerved suddenly while passing Malbrouk approaching the furlong pole. Malbrouk was knocked into the fence and all but lost Jockey Coucci. The stewards waved Coucci down when he was about to put in a claim of foul, so obvious

Duke and Bride Honeymooning In Old Castle

Britons Rush Station as King's Son and Wife Leave London.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 6.—The stalwart Duke of Gloucester, third son of Britain's monarchs, and his fair bride, Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, whose Scottish ancestors once plagued English kings by cattle-rustling, were on their honeymoon tonight in the heart of England.

Cheered on their way by thousands in front of St. Pancras railway station, the 35-year-old duke and the new fourth lady of the land, 33, sped to the seventeenth century Broughton Hall, an old family place of the bride's ancestors, after they were married in Buckingham Palace.

The royal couple had their first moment to themselves when they stepped into the flower-filled royal coach of the chromium-plated "Silver Jubilee" train which took them to Kettering. From there they continued by automobile to Broughton Hall.

Populace Cheers.

Ringing in their ears were the shouts of the crowds, only slightly smaller than those which saw the similar departure almost a year ago of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, then newlyweds.

The populace had been robbed of most of the pomp and pageantry which had been planned for the wedding, as the death of the bride's father, the Duke of Buccleuch, Oc-

Constitutionality Attack On AAA Tax Refused

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 6 (AP).—Federal Judge H. Church Ford today refused jurisdiction of an attack on constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's processing taxes. He denied the Louisville Provision Co. an injunction to restrain the collector of internal revenue from collecting the tax and dismissed the company's action to have the agricultural adjustment act declared invalid.

Judge Ford's opinion indicated that several dozen other cases pending in Kentucky Federal courts would be disposed of in the same way.

Grand Jury Fails to Get Wilson Case

Inquiry Is Incomplete, State Says; Long Delay Likely.

Developments Indicate New Search Is On for 'Trigger Man.'

The Allan B. Wilson murder case, recently broken by Washington police and Montgomery County authorities, will not be presented to the Montgomery County grand jury at this session because the investigation has not been completed, State's Attorney James H. Pugh announced yesterday.

The announcement came after a conference between Pugh and the so-called Wilson murder case squad of Washington police—Lieut. John Fowler and Detective Sergts. Floyd A. Truscott and Earl Hartman.

Pugh denied that any new principals, in addition to the five suspects, are involved so far, but the postponement lends credence to earlier reports that detectives are not sure that Tony ("The Stinger") Cugino was the "trigger man" who shot down the newspaper route agent instead of Edward ("Mickey") McDonald, local gambler.

Because of the delay the Wilson case will not get before the Montgomery County grand jury at least until the middle of January, as nine weeks elapse between grand jury sessions.

Four of the suspects are being held in the District pending completion of the investigation, and the fifth, John ("Slim") Dunn, former member of the Tri-State gang, is serving a term in Alcatras Prison for robbery. Claude Bailey, a sixth man, reputedly associated in the Wilson case, was killed while trying to escape from Lorton Reformatory.

The suspects in District Jail or precinct cells are William J. Cleary, Dewey Jenkins, Albert S. Sutton and Ernest W. Myers.

Cugino, who has been accused of actually firing the fatal shot, killed himself in a New York City jail cell several weeks ago.

1,000 See Firemen Fight 7th St. Blaze

Flames Break Out in Chain Grocery Store

Nearly 1,000 persons last night watched firemen fight a stubborn two-alarm blaze in the basement of a three-story building in the 600 block of Seventh street northwest. The first floor of the building is occupied by a branch of American Stores Co.

A large quantity of smoke billowed out of the structure. Firemen had difficulty in finding the source of the smoke, hey said the basement housed furnaces for heating the three floors of the building.

The fire was discovered by Charles Creel, 2544 Fourteenth street northwest, manager of the store's meat department, who saw smoke seeping up from the cellar.

Perilous Dash to Rescue 27 Planned as Ice Traps 2 Ships

Lack of Provisions Adds to Danger to Crew on One of Steamers Caught in Northern Lake Winnipeg.

By the United Press.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 1.—Rescue parties were poised tonight for a perilous dash to the northern reaches of Lake Winnipeg to carry aid to the crews of two steamers trapped in rapidly forming ice.

Heavy snows and zero temperatures added to the hazards of the journey. Location of one of the ships was believed known but the other, missing since October 24, may be in any one of countless harbors along the bleak, northern shore. The government steamer Bradbury attempted to thrust its way through the ice on a rescue mission but was forced to turn back.

The Lu-Berc, which sailed from Selkirk 14 days ago with a crew of 8 and 14 fishermen aboard, has been unreported since its departure. Its owners, the Lake Manitoba Fisheries, Ltd., were hopeful it was locked in the ice and had not met with more serious disaster. The ship was bound for Grand Rapids and Eagle Island, to take fishermen to their winter grounds.

The other ship was the Luana, with a crew of five aboard. Officials believed it may be held fast in ice at Knowow Island, in Knowow Bay. Skippered by Capt. Roy Cook, of Selkirk, a veteran seaman, the Luana had planned to pick up five fishermen from the fall camp at Kinwow.

If the Lu-Berc has not met with disaster, the men aboard are in no immediate danger, officials said. They recalled the ship was carrying full winter supplies from northern camps.

Greater concern was felt for the men on the Luana. It was thought rescue parties might encounter the crew of the Luana along the west shore, attempting to fight their way back overland. Lack of fuel and

Landon Calls For U. S. Curb On Spending

G.O.P. 'Possibility' in 1936 Urges Nation to 'Pay as You Go.'

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 6.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, frequently mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination next year, urged a "pay-as-you-go" policy for Government here tonight and called for a "sound, common sense administration."

Gov. Landon said before leaving Kansas to address the Ohio Chamber of Commerce that his trip had no political significance. Although he made no reference to next year's Presidential election his address tonight was sprinkled with generalizations on government.

He emphasized that the need was not for "more laws, or more programs, or more experimentation, but sound, common sense administration."

In recommending that the cost of government, especially the large relief expenditures, be put on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, Landon said that "the errors of an unwise financial policy have always been fatal to every government in the history of civilization."

The text of his address follows:

I am happy to be here tonight with the Chamber of Commerce of Ohio. In addition to my very natural appreciation of the honor of addressing you, I feel at home here. Ohio was the place of my

10 to 1 Odds On Roosevelt Slump to 2-1

Chances Said to Be Falling After G. O. P. Victories; Hoffman Gaining.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 6.—Betting odds that President Roosevelt will be re-elected in 1936, quoted five days ago by Wall street gambling commissioners at 10 to 1, skidded to 2 to 1 tonight as result of yesterday's elections. Wagers placed from the Middle West and New York knocked the odds down, the betting commissioners said.

At the same time, the gambling market boomed on the chances of several Republican possibilities to be nominated, notably Senator Hiram Johnson, of California; Gov. Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg, of Michigan, although the Republican betting favorites of last week retained their approximate positions in the handbook.

The odds were quoted by Ryan & Co., betting commissioners, who handle wagers only on commission. The odds, subject to change without notice, are determined solely by the bets placed with the house, they said.

Last Friday this house quoted Roosevelt a 10-to-1 favorite to be re-elected and 25 to 1 to win the Democratic nomination. Tonight the odds had shifted to 2 to 1 to be renominated and re-elected. On a dozen Republican possible candidates, the odds quoted are against their nomination. Odds on the possible election of Republican aspir-

Pennsylvania 'Blue Law' Dies In 92 Towns as 5,000,000 Vote

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 6.—Pennsylvania's "blue law" forbidding Sunday movies—enacted by a sturdy race of forbears in the seventeenth century—went to the scrap heap in 92 communities and received a pledge of support from 98 other cities and towns in a referendum which drew more than 5,000,000 citizens to the polls.

The State's metropolitan centers—Philadelphia and Pittsburgh—led the parade of cities disregarding the ancient law after a bitter campaign that ended in yesterday's election with church bells tolling in some sections to remind the people to come out and vote.

Altogether, 276 cities, towns and hamlets voted on the question in local option elections and many have yet to report the result.

Showing of movies after 2 p. m. on Sundays is legalized, effective as soon as the vote is certified, in those communities that favored the plan. The question is barred from the ballot for four years in towns that voted on it yesterday.

Church groups and ministerial associations fought the proposal to repeal the law, which previously withstood every effort to remove it from the State statute books for more than 100 years. Signs posted in some churchyards read "Vote no on Sunday movies." Arrayed in support of the proposal were the State Federation of Labor and some busi-

Election Returns.

Returns from 423 of Kentucky's 4,219 precincts gave Lieut. Gov. A. B. Chandler, New Deal supporter, a lead of 10,000 over Judge King Swope, Republican.

In Philadelphia S. Davis Wilson, Republican, was elected mayor over John B. Kelly, Democrat, with a plurality of 47,214. The Pennsylvania electorate voted overwhelmingly to repeal the ancient "blue laws" which forbade Sunday movies.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 6.—Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler's majority as the Democratic candidate for Governor over Circuit Judge King Swope mounted to more than 21,000 late today on unofficial returns from 708 of Kentucky's 4,219 precincts.

The vote stood: Chandler, 102700 and Swope, 81,552. The returns were from 100 of the State's 120 counties, none complete.

Chandler, bitterly opposed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon and Thomas S. Rhea, the latter his unsuccessful opponent in the Democratic primary, led from the start of tabulation today. In 223 precincts where exact comparison could be made with the 1931 gubernatorial race, which Laffoon won by 72,026 majority over his Republican opponent, Chandler showed a net loss of 12 votes. His campaign managers claimed the majority shown in the unofficial returns made his victory certain, while at Republican State headquarters the statement was made that Swope's victory would be assured by the complete final returns.

Repeal Leading.

The referendum on repeal of the State prohibition amendment showed 38,419 for repeal and 25,682 against on reports from 352 precincts. Returns from 299 precincts showed old-age pensions favored 47,025 to 6,040.

In the lieutenant governor's race, Keen Johnson, Democrat, on returns from 347 precincts, had 44,935 votes to 34,267 for his Republican opponent, J. J. Kavanagh.

Stocks Reach 4-Year Peak

Gains of 1 to 5 Points Scored in 3,000,000-Share Day.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 6.—Smashing gains of 1 to more than 5 points on the new York Stock Exchange today brought the first 3,000,000-share day since July, 1934, and sent the industrial average to a new high since 1931.

Sales approximated 3,080,000 shares, the largest day since July 26, 1934, when 3,338,050 shares were exchanged.

Better industrial indices, the General Motors dividend Monday, increasing motor car sales at the various shows and in some quarters, the Republican victory in the New York State Assembly election were attributed as reasons for the advance.

Opening on a rate of 4,000,000 shares for a full five-hour session, the market had sporadic waves of buying counteracting the profit-taking which crept in. The close in industrials was at the day's highs. Big blocks rolled out with General Motors opening at 15,000 shares for more than 2 points gain. There was one block of 24,700 shares of Warner Brothers common stock at mid-session—reflecting the Sunday movie vote in Pennsylvania, where there are a number of Warner of Warner Brothers theaters—and at the close there was a block of 11,400 shares of Commonwealth and Southern.

Administration Fears Backfire At NRA Parley

Worried by Possibility Manufacturers Will Openly Revolt.

By Felix Bruner.

Possibility that the industrial and labor conference called by George L. Berry, co-ordinator for business co-operation, for December 9 may result in a serious backfire against the New Deal was being considered by Administration officials yesterday.

The meeting, to be attended by business and trade association representatives, as well as representatives of labor, for the purpose of "accelerating business recovery, eliminating unemployment and maintaining business and labor standards," will, according to Berry, be thrown open for any action these representatives may wish to take.

Already there is evidence that there will be in attendance representatives of trade associations openly unfriendly to Administration industrial policies. This opens the way for a movement to adopt critical resolutions, such as those already adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers. Most of the business men attending the meeting will be members of one or both of these organizations.

Exceeds Instructions.

Furthermore, the meeting will be held following expected announcement of the results of the Chamber of Commerce Nation-wide poll on the question of Government in business. It is a foregone conclusion that the result of this poll will be in opposition to further Government interference.

There is even a question of whether President Roosevelt, in appointing Berry, intended that such a free-for-all conference should be held. Berry's official instructions are to consult with representatives of labor and business for the purpose set out in Berry's announcement, but there is no indication that this was intended to develop into a mass meeting.

The President himself is holding a series of conferences with business leaders on the problem of the growing spread betwen production and employment, but these conferences are with individuals and small groups and give no opportunity for mass public expression.

Roper Not Consulted.

That Berry is acting pretty much on his own was fuhrer demonstrated yesterday when Secretary Roper indicated that he had not been consulted about the proposed pow-wow. Berry has announced he intends to form a council of business men and labor representatives on a more or less permanent basis for the purpose of considering problems of business and Government.

This organization would parallel to some extent the business advisory and planning council of the Commerce Department, which has been in existence for two years and which Roper said will continue to function. A meeting of the latter organization has been called for December 4 and 5, less than a week before the Berry meeting.

Roper said he "assumed" the council would participate in the Berry meeting, in spite of Berry's previous statement that he did not know about the council. At Berry's office yesterday it was said that in spite of Berry's remark, members of the council had been invited to attend. Roper said he did not know whether the invitation had been received or not.

"Maj. Berry no doubt will cooperate with me, for we have had a council that has been functioning for two years."

Old Body to Continue.

Informed of Berry's lack of knowledge of the council, Roper replied that "deep streams run quietly."

"The council will continue to function in its advisory relationship to this department," Roper said. "It will study business legislation."

It was reported that among the legislative possibilities that the council will study will be the possibility of some law to replace NRA. This also is expected to be the principal purpose of the Berry council. Both Berry and Roper insisted that they would not attempt to tell their respective councils what to do.

The Commerce Department group, Roper said, has "opened up a channel whereby we can study business problems and the Administration can have the benefit of that study."

"It opens up a gateway," he said, "for very valuable results to the Administration and to business."

Between You and Me

G. O. P.'s Headline Victory; Roosevelt Decline Is Negligible; Analysis of Election Results.

By Raymond Clapper

HEADLINES gave a smashing victory to the Republicans in the Eastern elections. But the election figures down in the dispatches put a completely different light on the result. Republicans won a headline victory.

It is all very well for Republican National Chairman Fletcher to issue a statement that the "boondogglers are on their way out," and for Senator Hastings, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, to say that the result "shows beyond dispute that the soundness of the American people can always be counted upon to rout fantastic communistic schemes."

That is what political spokesmen would be expected to say. It is their job—after the sad years through which the Republican Party has been—to seize upon available straws and to cheer their comrades on.

But cold-blooded analysis will show, and it is probab'e that Republican leaders in the privacy of their inner offices would agree with this that President Roosevelt still is tremendously strong.

As the situation stands today he would be very likely to carry New York State—which would mean his re-election.

Democratic strength appears to have receded slightly from the 1934 peak when it went to such abnormal lengths that the Democrats swept Pennsylvania, and for the first time in 22 years captured the New York Assembly by a margin of four seats. Only the complete disappearance of the Republican Party would permit such a situation to continue.

Now there has been a recession. But if the Republicans are satisfied with it, they are easily pleased. These results indicate that the Democratic strength is slipping and that probably Mr. Roosevelt is slipping—but about as fast as a glacier creeps down a mountain side.

At the present rate of the Democratic decline, not even the youngest Young Republican would live long enough to see the inside of the White House. In other words, the momentum of the Republican comeback will have to speed up any-fold in order to put them back in Washington one year from now.

New York State—The Associated Press reported that the electorate of President Roosevelt's home State turned decisively against the New Deal. That is at least a slight exaggeration. Out of a total of 150 Assembly seats, the Republicans gained nine. This replaces the present Democratic margin of four votes with a Republican margin of 14 votes. It gives the Republicans a working majority in the Assembly again, the same as they had throughout Smith's time as Governor, though Roosevelt's two terms in Albany and through the Roosevelt Presidential landslide of 1932.

But casting up the total vote registered throughout the State for assemblymen, Republicans were a half-million votes behind the Democrats. In 1932 Roosevelt carried the State for President by 597,000 votes. Not much Republican progress there. For purposes of trying to foresee what would happen in a presidential vote, that State-wide figure is the only one which means anything because presidential electors are chosen by State-wide vote. If it means anything, it means that the Democrats are still able to poll a majority in New York State.

Wilson, in 1916, is the only President who has been elected since the Civil War without New York. With that exception, the winner always has been the candidate who carried New York.

New York City—Democrats came back in a landslide in New York City. They cleaned out the board of aldermen except for two seats, taking 62 of the 65 seats. Of 16 Republicans and Fusionists who composed the minority on the board, Democrats picked off 14. Tammany has taken New York away from Mayor LaGuardia, polling pluralities like those in Jimmy Walker's gay days. Will it give these majorities to Roosevelt next year? The answer to that is almost the answer to 1936.

The vote for assemblymen in New York City totaled a 739,000 majority for the Democrats.

If all of this is a smashing defeat for the New Deal, the Administration Democrats are ready to take more of the same right on the chin.

Philadelphia—Republicans are attaching favorable significance to the fact that thye elected a mayor in Philadelphia. They did elect a mayor although it happens that he voted for Roosevelt in 1932 and consequently was unable to register this year as a Republican and therefore could not vote in his own election. This gentleman, S. Davis Wilson, won by less than 50,000 votes. Even Hoover, in 1932, carried the city by 100,000 votes. Wilson polled 53 per cent of the vote and Hoover 55 per cent. His predecessor won by 400,000 in 1931.

However the result is a recession of Democratic strength from one year ago when Democratic Gov Earle came within 4,000 votes of carrying Philadelphia.

What pleases Republicans most about this victory is that it enables them to retain control of the Philadelphia election machinery—which will be no small advantage next year. This, the Republicans say, keeps Pennsylvania safe for next year. Democrats say the close margin makes Pennsylvania a doubtful State.

New Jersey — Democrats lost eight seats in the Assembly and gained two in the Senate. Both houses remain Republican.

Here again is a situation somewhat like that in New York. Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Democratic boss of the State, piled up a majority of 137,000 for Democratic assembly candidates in Hudson County, his stronghold. In 1932 he gave Roosevelt a Hudson County majority of 117,000 which offset the normally Republican majorities down-State and gave Roosevelt a State-wide majority of 30,000. Repetition of this vote next year would give New Jersey to Roosevelt again.

Kentucky—On the basis of incomplete returns, the Democratic candidate for Governor, "Happy" Chandler, wins in face of a bitter party split, in which the present Democratic Governor bolted to the Republican candidate.

Republicans refrained from making the New Deal an issue, even going to the point of refusing to permit John Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman and assistant to National Chairman Fletcher, to go into the State and make an anti-New Deal speech. So the Republicans now say, and with justification, that the New Deal was not an issue. What would they have said had the Republicans elected a Governor.

Mayors—Republicans mde their best showing, and they averaged high, in election of mayors in many cities. They were victorious in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit and numerous smaller localities. However, some minor honors went to the Democrats. They picked up a mayor in Hartford, Conn., where the Roosevelt party is supposed to be poison, and, as Democratic National Chairman Farley pointed out in his statement on the election, Roosevelt's own Hyde Park elected a Democratic supervisor for the first time in 35 years.

As to the re-election of the Socialist Mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., by double his previous majority, some say that is a victory for the New Deal. Roosevelt Democrats say it shows that Bridgeport will take anybody in preference to a Republican. You can take your choice, but don't pay any money.

ants to the White House will take form about January 15, the commissioners said.

Last Friday the odds on Roosevelt's reelection slipped off to 7 to 1, Ryan & Co. said, and Monday night had fallen to 5 to 1 on the eve of the off-year elections. Opening price election day morning was 3½ to 1. It dropped to tonight's yuotatoin as soon as election returns were tabulated in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

This betting house handled $55,300 at odds of 2 to 1 that the Republicans would recapture control of the New York State Assembly, which they did in Tuesday's elec-

Knox Still Leads.

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, still leads the Republican possibilities in Ryan's handbook. Five days ago they offered even money he would not be nominated and elected. The odds remained the same tonight, except that the terms of the offer were changed to "not be nominated" instead of "nominated and elected," a change made in the quotations on all the Republican possibilities. Most of the betting support for Knox came from the Middle West and South, the commissioners said.

Gov. Alfred E. Landon, of Kansas, against whom odds of 2½ to 1 were quoted last week, was in second place among the Republicans tonight at 1 3-5 to 1. His support is in the Middle West.

Senator William E. Borah, 4 to 1 last week, slipped ahead of Herbert Hoover, whose odds remained stationary at 3 to 1, when the Idaho Senator shortened to 2½ to 1 tonight. Borah's support is from the West and from Washington, D. C., and Hoover's is spotted all over the country.

and with increased prestige. Vare died more than a year ago.

Not only did the Republicans elect their mayoralty candidate, S. Davis Wilson, but they overcame terrific opposition in every councilmanic fight. City council will be, as it is now, 100 per cent Republican.

Whether Mayor-Elect Wilson, a dynamic figure in municipal politics and a winner in most battles he has entered, will become the leader, time determine.

At present, Edwin R. Cox, by virtue of his office as president of city council and chairman of the Republican city committee, is the titular head of the party in Philadelphia. But Cox before the last primary announced he was not a candidate for re-election and will leave the city council in January when it reorganizes. Whether he will remain chairman of the city committee until the end of his term next June, he has not indicated.

Before that time will be held the party primary for the election of delegates to the Republican National Convention, candidates for State treasurer and auditor general, Legislature, and United States House of Representatives.

Riding on the wave of victory, Wilson today heard enthusiastic followers proclaim him as the next Governor. Whether he has any ambition in that direction he has not stated, but if his friends insist on preparing him for the Gubernatorial election in 1938 they may try to gain control of the city party machinery.

Foes Repelled From Makale, Says Ethiopia

Italians, However, Tell of Triumphal Entry of Force Into City.

Gugsa, traitorous son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, was reported by scouts today to headquarters of an invading Italian army eager to come to grips with their Ethiopian foes.

While blackshirts of the main columns adsvancing on Makale kicked dried mud from their hob-nailed boot and chafed at the halt enforced by heavy rains, Gugsa's advance men hurried into the objective city under cover of darkness last night. They were greeted "with enthusiasm" by the populace, the scouts declared.

Tomorro wthe main push goes on.

An Italian flag, the scouts reported, already is flying in Makale, although the city has not formally Ethiopians Gathering.

Meanwhile, natives reported, that Ethiopian warriors "in so great a number they can not be counted" are gathering at Ambo and Alaji for a pitched battle with the advancing Italians.

Spearhead battalions of the Fascist forces are bivouacked 15 miles short of Makale. When the advance is resumed tomorrow, the columns will continue in mass formation on a 30-mile front, flung across historic "English Street," route of Gen. Napier's advance on the forces of Emperor Theodore in the last century, and across the caravan routes between Hauzien and Makale.

Up to and behind Makale, scouting patrols have scoured the country, finding small bands of enemy fighters south of the city. Advance guards, including a unit of light infantry, a mountain artillery battery, askari (native) foot fighters and cavalry, hold outposts well in advance of the main line.

The advance artillery is mule-mounted and flanked by thousands of Askari horsemen, while supply columns stretch back to the main front.

When the push of the main forces is resumed, the advance guards will cover their front flank with a ring of artillery and machine-gun outposts.

Advance Is Outlined.

There was indications the armies would advance in this manner:

The column of Gen. Ruggiero Santini will move up through Agula to Dolo from Wogoro.

Gugsa's natives, supported by heavy detachments of Askaris, will advance from Enda Choeras into and beyond Makale.

The Dankalis, of Gen. Mariotti's "mystery column," on the east, will take Mount Cabtal, which dominates he caravan trail at the junction of Aic and Amesal, east of Agula. These fierse warriors already are in the Mail Taganne region.

Gen. Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli's Eritrean regulars will push ahead at dawn through the Unethonogli Pass commanding the valley route into Makale.

Road builders have laid truck roads to the army during its two-day halt. Two-way roads now link Adigrat and Hauzien and wind through the army to Hualalo and Adi Magada, south of Agula.

Today Santini received a group of youths sent from the city by local authorities to welcome the Italians. These youths said Makale priests were preparing religious ceremonies and festivals for the entry of the armies.

but, informed sources stated, she will take no advantage of the war situation

If this attitude results in hitting Italy harder than the African empire, that is a geographical and commercial situation for which the Reich is not responsible, Germans here explained.

"Big gains do not constitute good neutrality," said a German spokesman.

Not Exporting Arms.

It also was understood here that Germany is not exporting arms or ammunition to either Italy or Ethiopia. League circles presumed the Reich would not alter this policy.

The German decision was read at a private session of the committee of 18, which as the executive organ of the League's "general staff" of 52 states, adopted a series of resolutions dealing with the enforcement of sanctions November 18.

Among these were resolutions concerning the transit of goods, contracts in course of execution and clearing agreements. Another—and vital decision—would provide for possible inclusion of oil, coal, iron and steel in the "key products" which may not be exported to Italy.

Germany is a heavy seller of some of these to Italy. Therefore, delegates were wondering whether the Reich's attitude of nonprofiteering would be followed by an indication she will not sell such products to belligerents if other countries, including the United States, make a similar agreement.

Britain Is Firm In Her Demands To Mussolini

No Specific Proposals Made to Relieve Mediterranean Tension.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 6.—Great Britain continued to stand firm tonight in the position that Italy must reduce her Libyan garrisons to normal strength and stop anti-British press and propaganda attacks before London will reduce her large fleet concentration in the mediterranean.

In authoritative quarters it was said a previous deadlock in Anglo-Italian views was broken by the conversation yesterday between Premier Mussolini and Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome. Progress was made toward a better understanding, it was asserted, but no specific proposals to relieve the recent tension have materialized.

(A Paris dispatch said it was reported in diplomatic circles there that the "Mediterranean problem" had been solved with Britain agreeing to reduce her fleet and Italy her troop concentrations in Libya. Official announcement, it was said, would be delayed until after Britain's general elections November 14).

Sir Eric reported to the foreign office that he and Il Duce discussed all factors of the situation. No final conclusions were reached, and the conversations will continue.

Authoritative sources asserted that while the British would be most happy if a joint reduction in forces could be worked out, this could only follow Il Duce's meeting the essential conditions laid down here.

Paris reports that an accord already had been reached were denied.

tober 19, had caused a change in the program.

The ceremony in the white-gold chapel at Buckingham Palace was colorful in itself, but only 125 persons witnessed it, all relatives or close friends of the families.

The 35-year-old Duke of Gloucester, wearing a gold-faced blue tunic, scralet breeches and black-topped boots, placed the Welsh gold wedding ring on the finger of his bride, who wore pearl-shaded satin, and they made their vows before the berobed Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England.

King in Soldier's Garb.

King George wore a field marshal's uniform and Queen Mary a jewel-blue chiffon velvet gown.

The Prince of Wales, who passed the wedding ring to his brother, wore the uniform of colonel of the Welsh Guards, and the Duke of York was garbed in the uniform of colonel of the Scots Guards.

Lady Alice promised "To love, cherish and obey 'til death do us part."

London took the 33-year-old border maid to its heart, though a little less enthusiastically than it did the more glamorous Princess Marina of Greece, the bride of the Duke of Kent.

The greatest cheer went up when the new duchess, a few minutes after she was united to the duke—thereby leaving the Prince of Wales the lone bachelor in the royal family—appeared on the balcony of Buckingham Palace.

"Wales' Turn Now."

The throngs which had waited since the early morning hours burst into excited cries of delight. Such remarks were heard as, "Isn't she lucky!" and "Well, it's Wales' turn now."

When the couple later had reached the railway station, and the police lines relaxed, a huge crowd raced pell mell up the sloping entrance of the begrimed old station, hoping to catch a last glimpse of the royal pair. But the train bearing the big broad-shouldered duke and his bride had already pulled out for Kettering.

Increasing majorities piled up tonight for the "reecealer" in hiladelphia and ittsburgh, where some theater managers have been preparing for weeks for the Sunday opening.

Capital Fights Repeal.

Among other towns favoring it the Erie, Scranton, Reading, Oil City, Sharon and Bradford. Harrisburg, the State capital, voted down the proposal, a sdid Altoona, Allentown, Hazleton, Bethlehem, York, Greenville, Greencastle, Lewistown, Hanover, Uniontown and historic Gettysburg.

Several towns—notably Erie and Franklin—have permitted Sunday shows in the past notwithstanding the law. Erie voted about 10 to 1 to make the operation legal.

Authority to vote on the question came from th elast Legislature, swept into office with the administration of Gov. George H. Earle, Pennsylvania's first Democratic Governor in more than 40 years.

Unaffected by the vote were scores of regulations involved in other Sunday "Blue Laws" prohibiting sale of foodstuffs and confections, amusements and hunting. Many towns do not enforce these laws to the letter. Sunday baseball and footmall were legalized more than a year ago.

food would make such an attempt exteremely dangerous, officials said.

The rescue parties arranged to leave Hodgson early tonight. They will go by car down the frozen Fisher River 25 miles to Fisher Bay. None knew how far they would have to go through biting cold into the desolate country.

The Bradbury, fighting ice the entire distance from Barrows, reached Selkirk last night with her fuel supply exhausted. The ship is regarded as the stoutest ice breaker on the lake but it encountered such heavy formations off the Red River breakwater that it required an hour and a half's struggle to make a half mile into the mouth of the river.

There the Bradbury released the Steamers Tanawa and Montgomery from the ice. They followed in the Bradbury's wake to port.

The crew of the steamer Betty-Lew, trapped in the ice, at Birch Point, reached Selkirk today. They had made their way overland to Riverton.

The Bradbury had started to the rescue of the Betty-Lew but was driven back by a raging snowstorm and a failing coal supply.

LINCOLN-ZEPHYR

THE FORD AND LINCOLN TWELVE-CYLINDER VALUE AT MEDIUM PRICE

BORN in the Lincoln tradition, bearing the Lincoln name, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR brings to the medium-price field traditional Ford-Lincoln standards of value. Built in its own specially equipped division of the Lincoln plant, famous for precision workmanship, this new car reflects the combined Ford-Lincoln engineering experience, manufacturing ability and economic resources.

Powered with a 110-horsepower 12-cylinder engine of the V-type, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR provides performance of a high order, combined with unusual economy. The wide, roomy body, on a wheelbase of 122 inches with springbase of 133 inches, has ample room for six passengers and luggage. The spare wheel is carried concealed under the rear deck.

At first glimpse the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR will give you a new concept of beauty. Here a motor car's form is determined logically by a motor car's function. Streamlines flow, uninterrupted, from bow to stern, from side to side; and every line satisfies the eye.

But the beauty of the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR carries a significance larger than any style trend. It reflects new principles of design. Just as trusses of steel make possible the bridge, light in weight but great in strength, steel trusses underlie the curves of this new car. Body and frame are one, welded together.

The great safety provided by this modern construction is enhanced by ease of handling and control. On all types of roads, under all conditions of travel, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR conveys the feeling of safety because of its low center of gravity and correct distribution of weight.

Inherent in the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR, too, is a new rhythm of motoring. Many persons have remarked that the back seat is as comfortable as the front, and that the car rides as gently with one passenger as with six. Soft transverse springs minimize jounces, jolts, bumps—"up-and-down" motions that tire the motorist. With its alert and responsive V-12 cylinder motor, this car glides over all kinds of road surfaces without transmitting their shocks to driver or passengers.

For all its forward-reaching design, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR contains nothing experimental. It has been tested more rigorously by Lincoln engineers than it could be by owners. Working parts are easy of access. Basic design and details of construction make the car economical to use.

Inspect the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR today. Discover, for yourself, the new concept of beauty, the new rhythm of motoring.

On The Air Today

IF YOU'VE been wondering how symphonies are put together, listen in at 11:30 this morning over WRC. A "mike" will be installed in Severance Hall, Cleveland, to broadcast the proceedings of a Cleveland orchestra rehearsal. Listeners will hear Artur Rodzinsky conduct a regular rehearsal, stopping whenever necessary to explain to his musicians just how he wants this phrase or that note played. This chance to eavesdrop through the keyhole of an orchestral workshop will be the first broadcast of its kind on record.

• • • •

A series of Thursday lecture-recitals, presented by the N. B. C. Music Guild will be inaugurated today (WMAL at 2:30) with Dr. Daniel Gregory Mason, American composer, discussing Franz Schubert. Other famous musicians will be dealt with in succeeding weeks.

• • • •

Also at 2:30 (over WJSV), Dorothy Gordon will present a program of folk songs typical of Nova Scotia, Greenland and the Eskimos when the "American School of the Air" is broadcast. Special arrangements of Grieg's "In the Hall of the Mountain King" and Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" will be included.

• • • •

The young Mexican tenor, Tito Guizar, will sing the aria, "Ecco Ridente in Cielo" from Rossini's opera, "Barber of Seville" (WJSV at 5:45). Among other of his selections will be "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "La Cucaracha"—which is what we call variety.

• • • •

Miriam Hopkins returns to the air for the first time since last spring to head the bill for Rudy Valle's Variety Hour (WRC at 8.) Others present will include "Prof." Robert Wildhack, expert in laughs, sneezes and snores, and Doris Webster, 18-year-old graduate of Major Bowes' Amateur Hour. And, of course, Mr. Valle himself.

• • • •

A Hollywood version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as it would never be played will feature the "Harve and Esther" broadcast (WJSV at 8). In his one-man show, Teddy Bergman will don burnt cork and do Uncle Tom and Topsy as they might be portrayed by Rubinoff and Eve Sully. As Simon Legree, in the manner of Eric Blore, he'll chase himself across the ice in the guise of Eliza as she might be done by Garbo. And as Mae West might play Little Eva, he'll don cardboard wings for the finale.

• • • •

Rose Bampton, mezzo-soprano of concert and opera fame, will star in the Atwater-Kent program (WJSV at 8:30). She will sing Fritz Kreisler's "Liebesleid," Tschaikowsky's "None But the Lonely Heart," the gay "Gypsy Song" from "Carmen" and Noel Coward's "Zigeuner" from "Bittersweet."

• • • •

In honor of Helen Jepson's farewell appearance before departing for Hollywood (they all seem to get there eventually), Paul Whiteman has assembled an impressive list of stars for his Music Hall (WRC at 10). Included will be Frederick Jagel, Metropolitan opera star, Bob Burns, whose comment on current events in Ozarkian idiom is wonderful to hear, and Art Tatem, famous blind pianist. And, oh, yes—the Pickens sisters.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.
There's a reason why so many people find dieting aids and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right. All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" sets in a furnace. Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So why not lose fat the easy way—without starvation diets or back-breaking, bending and rolling exercises? Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists.

Light an Old Gold

AMERICA'S SMOOTHEST CIGARETTE
for young ideas

NOTHING warms up hands . . . and hearts, so much as "young ideas"! That's why it means plenty, when folks say, "Light an Old Gold for young ideas!" It means that the appealing taste of a smooth Old Gold adds to the joy of living. It means that Old Gold's finer tobaccos (ripened and mellowed by Nature's sunshine) stimulate young ideas.

A PLAN I CAN UNDERSTAND—
THE GMAC 6% time payment plan for new cars

SIMPLE AS A.B.C.
A TAKE YOUR UNPAID BALANCE
B ADD COST OF INSURANCE
C MULTIPLY BY 6% — 12 MONTHS' PLAN
[One-half of one per cent per month for periods more or less than 12 months]
THAT'S YOUR WHOLE FINANCING COST
NO EXTRAS • NO SERVICE FEES • NO OTHER CHARGES
*In some states a small legal documentary fee is required.

Buyers of new General Motors models are already taking advantage of the new GMAC 6% Time Payment Plan announced only last week. They find that it is convenient, economical and easy to understand.

Think what it means to you, who have been considering the purchase of a new, modern automobile on time payments. By the simplest arithmetic—by merely multiplying the unpaid balance and the cost of insurance by 6%—you know in advance the total financing cost.

Not only is this plan as simple as A, B, C, but best of all, it saves you money. It is entirely free of all so-called "service" or other charges. It is a straightforward business transaction—whereby you pay 6% and only 6% for the privilege of budgeting the cost of your new car and its insurance into your income. Understand, this is not 6% interest, but simply a convenient multiplier which anyone can use and readily understand.

And finally, when you buy a new Cadillac or Buick, Chevrolet or Pontiac, Oldsmobile or La Salle on this plan, it will be insured in the General Exchange Insurance Corporation. Your insurance policy will cover Fire, Theft and Accidental Damage, including Collision.

Wherever you live, you can take immediate advantage of this new, more economical way to buy the new car you have long wanted.

General Motors dealers all over the United States are ready to serve you on this plan Now, Today.

GENERAL MOTORS ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION

Make your own comparisons To understand the real economy of the new GMAC plan, compare it with other finance plans on a dollars and cents basis. And be sure to include similar insurance protection. Further details are available now from dealers in General Motors Cars.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Morgan Baker.

THE first request for a charter by a group of municipal employes, who, with State and county employes, are now eligible to organize under the American Federation of Labor banner through the American Federation of Government Employes, was received yesterday, it is announced at A. F. G. E. headquarters here.

BAKER.

The charter request was sent in by A. F. G. E. Vice President Perry S. Myers, of the Seattle district, on behalf of the municipal employes of Seattle. This city is a strongly organized municipality, one of the labor strongholds of the entire country, and there is every expectation that the new lodge, tentatively numbered 1,001, will soon be a large organization, A. F. G. E. officials said.

For the time being, in order to distinguish State, county and municipal employes' groups from lodges of National Government employes, the State, county and city lodges will be numbered serially, beginning with 1,001.

Temporary officers of the Seattle group include Edwin M. Hill, president; George W. Lewis, secretary, and Charles H. Bates, treasurer.

The AFGE has received a number of other requests for charters, but this is the first completed in form to result in a temporary certificate of affiliation.

E. Claude Babcock, AFGE president, also received yesterday another new lodge composed of custodial employes of the Miami, Fla., postoffice, which will have the designation of No. 224.

Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., solicitor of the Department of Labor, has been transferred to a new post in the Department of Jutice, where he will deal particularly with litigation pertaining to labor laws and labor problems. Mr. Wyzanski is a graduate of Harvard University.

Rhode Island Bean Fete.

Mrs. D. J. Heffernan (P), Census Bureau, will be hostess to members of the Rhode Island State Society at an old-fashioned New England baked bean supper at her home, 1502 North Columbus street, Ballston, Va., Saturday night.

Mrs. Ada M. Riley (F), Supplies and Accounts, Navy, who is secretary-treasurer of the society, urges all reservations be made before tomorrow night by calling her at Navy Department, Branch 323, or calling Mrs. Heffernan at Commerce Department, Branch 2710.

W. L. McAtee, principal biologist and technical adviser to the chief, Biological Survey, has written an article on "Plants Valuable for Wild Life Utilization and for Ercsion Control," which is being distributed in booklet form to conservationists and others interested.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary Editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians and other acts; screen, Rochelle Hudson and Henry Fonda in "Way Down East"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall in "The Dark Angel"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell and seven other stars in "Broadway Melody of 1936").

Going Collegiate!

The Civil Service, 'twas whispered to me,
Is partial now to a degree
And desires men with an "A. B."
Which irks our friends A. F. G. E.,
Who state, as doubtless you'll agree,
Though "A. B." is in "able,"
It is far from a fable
That others quite bright you will see.

RALPH I. EGAN (P),
Commerce.

Among those celebrating birthdays today are Mrs. M. J. Spottswood (P), Files Section, Smithsonian Institution, and Robert A. Cushman, entomologist, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, who is now in his thirtieth year of service with the Department of Agriculture.

Dorset Successor Appointed.

Robert M. Chapin has been appointed chief of the Biochemic Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry, to succeed the late Dr. Marion Dorset, who died last July. Mr. Chapin has served as acting chief of this division, which is responsible for many lines of important research and other technical activities. He undertakes his new duties with a background of 28 years of investigational work in animal industry. During this time he conducted research and tests for the development and standardizing of dipping fluids, disinfectants, and related products and is the author of numerous publications in those fields. He has collaborated also with other investigators in a wide range of chemical and biological studies.

Mr. Chapin is a native of Massachusetts and a graduate of Amherst College. He also took post-graduate work in chemistry in that institution and served as instructor in chemistry in 1907, when he entered the Bureau of Animal Industry.

William S. Halstead (F), War, is the inventor of a frequency control and monitoring system, which operates without the use of thermostats or devices employing moving thermo-responsive elements.

Joins International Institute.

J. Clyde Marquis, for more than a decade chief of the Division of Information of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, has been appointed United States member of the committee of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, succeeding Dr. Henry C. Taylor, also formerly of the Department of Agriculture, who has resigned to accept a private position.

Mr. Marquis is widely known as an agricultural economist and former magazine editor and newspaperman. He is a graduate of Purdue University.

Frostburg to Employ Delinquent Taxpayers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Nov. 6.—The mayor and city council have decided to employ men who are in arrears in city taxes and water rents to carry on the work of removing stumps at Piney Run Dam Site which has been at a standstill pending the outcome of the wage dispute between relief workers and the Works Program Administration. The action followed a letter from Whitman, Requard and Smith, engineers, who advised city officials that work on the dam will be completed by December, but water can not run into the dam until the stumps have been removed.

The city clerk was instructed to contact 20 men today and put them to work on the project until the WPA relief workers controversy is settled, in order to protect the city's interests.

The Elections.

In the issue of The Post for October 27 the American Institute of Public Opinion announced that, as of last month, 54 per cent of the major-party vote in the Middle Atlantic States was Republican and 46 per cent Democratic. And in the coming New York Assembly 54.7 per cent of the legislators will be Republican and 45.3 per cent Democrats.

This indication of the reliability of the polls in the "America Speaks" series may assist non-partisan observers in assessing the significance of Tuesday's voting. In New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, excepting Mayor Hague's triumph in Hudson County, the trend was unquestionably for the Republicans, as forecasts have indicated along the eastern seaboard north of the Potomac.

The local elections, however, gave little basis for judgment on the political opinion of the Central and Western States, which all analysts regard as the seat of New Deal strength. Mayor Rossi's victory in San Francisco, like the Republican victories in Ohio cities, are signs that this strength is not too firm. But as far as the Kentucky gubernatorial vote indicates anything more than the customary interim job scramble, it seems to show that border sentiment is still none too favorable to the G. O. P.

Two factors with an importance not subject to tabular analysis stand out from the returns. One is the evidence that patronage, relief largesse and lack of effective opposition are collectively unable to offset the increasingly questioning note of the electorate on many New Deal policies. Neither the business upswing nor vague promises of sound national financing in the unspecified future is adequate to keep a growing proportion of thoughtful Americans from demanding, in the only way that really counts, that the Administration should return to the basic principles of good government, or make way for one that will.

Another interesting result of this week's election is found in the change of composition in the New York Assembly, from a Democratic majority of four to a Republican majority of 14. Mr. Farley may emphasize all the possible offsetting factors for this shift. But the fact remains that it reveals some jeopardy to Democratic control of New York. And the record shows how difficult it is to carry a Presidential election without New York in the winning column.

Landon's Homely Advice.

If only three words could be used to describe Gov. Landon's philosophy of government, they would undoubtedly be: "Use common sense." "The West was built on faith, courage and the homely common sense virtues of thrift, toil and neighborly cooperation," he told the Ohio Chamber of Commerce at Cleveland. "In Kansas they remain our creed." Add to this his later emphasis on "individual responsibility" and the nutshell in which the Governor carries his advice to the country will be fairly well filled.

This simplicity is refreshing. Gov. Landon did not attempt to outline a complete formula of economic recovery, as many less astute aspirants to the Presidential nomination have done. Instead he was content to outline the achievements of Kansas, and draw an occasional moral that may be applied to all States or individuals. Nor does the Governor claim all the credit for reducing general property taxes 32 per cent and the cost of Kansas' government 22 per cent. "The credit does not belong to any one State administration," he said, "nor to any one political party."

In the course of his remarks, Gov. Landon made a complete answer to FERA Administrator Hopkins' charge that the State of Kansas has contributed nothing toward relief of its unemployed. But that reply consisted only of a recital of facts, without bias or political insinuations. Mr. Hopkins was not mentioned and the unfairness of his charge was ignored. The Governor's imperturbability and lack of partisanship in this respect greatly accentuated interest in the remainder of his address.

"We have tried, and I believe we have, in a measure, succeeded by observing some of the fundamental homely teachings of experience," said Mr. Landon. "* * * What we have done in Kansas is what a sensible family does in the face of reduced income. * * * Let us be certain that we are making only those changes which are real improvements—changes dictated not by wishful theory, but by the stern teachings of experience." The homely nature of these principles plus the moderate tone of the entire address clearly indicate that Gov. Landon is much more than a politician seeking office.

Behind The Oehmann Case.

Exoneration of Building Inspector Oehmann of eight relatively minor charges preferred against him obviously does not dispose of the more important issues raised at his hearing. The special board which heard the charges found no evidence whatever of corruption. Indeed, the one charge involving gross misconduct was dismissed with a note of commendation for Col. Oehmann. This does not mean, however, that the building inspector's office is being managed with that degree of efficiency which the people have a right to expect.

The office of the building inspector was properly criticized for its failure to enforce an order of the Commissioners requiring erection of a fire escape on a rooming house. Like some of the other complaints, this does not in any way involve the integrity of Col. Oehmann, but it does indicate some negligence on the part of his office. Unless the causes of any justifiably suspected inefficiency can be corrected, the investigation will have been a complete waste of time.

More serious still is the reported breakdown of morale in the building inspector's office. Employes are said to be keeping personal files to protect themselves against charges by their associates or superiors. The testimony of some employes clearly shows that friction has reached a point where smooth functioning cannot be expected. Moreover, one of the chief points in Col. Oehmann's defense was that the charges against him represent a conspiracy on the part of other officials to "get" his job. That argument obviously exposes deeper sources of trouble than all of the formal charges combined.

It appears that friction has been brewing ever since the building inspector's office was brought under the supervision of a director of inspection in 1932. Prior to that time Col. Oehmann was answerable only to the District Commissioners. Now all the municipal inspection service has been coordinated under one head. Col. Oehmann, like the chief electrical inspector and the inspector of plumbing, is directly responsible to Capt. Oram, the director of inspection. It was apparent in the hearing that this arrangement is distasteful to Col. Oehmann.

If the personnel which has been brought within this closer-knit organization can not work in harmony together, it is the duty of the District Commissioners to bring about a reorganization. Unfortunately the public hearing of relatively petty charges against Col. Oehmann may accentuate the distrust and suspicion within the inspection service. Since the Commissioners are fully aware of these undercurrents, it is logical to expect that the airing of complaints against the building inspector's office will be merely preliminary to serious concentration upon the real source of trouble.

What's In A Name?

The re-election of Jasper McLevy as mayor of the industrial city of Bridgeport, Conn., along with the entire Socialist ticket, indicates that the phobia which once was widely associated with the term Socialist is disappearing. Hitherto a Socialist mayor of an Eastern city was almost unthinkable, this party having its active strength only in cities with a large element of voters of German extraction.

True, Mr. McLevy is not a Socialist of the left wing and he dislikes Communists as intensely as does Mr. William Green. Nor is it apparent that the smoke-palled Connecticut manufacturing center has enjoyed, during Mr. McLevy's first term, any drastic setting-up of a Socialist government. It is said, indeed, that his honesty and his ability to keep taxes at a minimum probably had as much to do with his re-election as his Socialistic tenets.

Nevertheless to have an entire city government made up for the second time of self-styled Socialists, whether of the left or the right, is pretty nearly all the proof needed that there is no longer any hysterical stigma attached to the appellation. This is encouraging, for it may mean that candidates in the future who are Socialists at heart will not have to masquerade under false banners proclaiming them New Dealers or Progressives or what have you.

If Mr. McLevy has done little toward the socialization of Connecticut economy, he has done nothing to retard it, and he has aided the advance of political honesty no little.

New Responsibility Also.

Adjustment of Alabama's judicial practices to the Supreme Court's decision in the Scottsboro case seems to be complete with the selection of two Negroes as prospective members of the grand jury that will be asked to return new indictments against the accused colored youths. In taking this action Jackson County is merely following the precedent of other Alabama subdivisions. Apparently Gov. Graves' order that the Supreme Court decision be accepted and upheld "in letter and in spirit" is being faithfully carried out.

Local authorities had no reasonable alternative, of course, to compliance with constitutional requirements regarding jury service, as interpreted by the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, they are to be commended for the good spirit in which they have accepted the shattering of a deep-seated custom. Indefensible racial discriminations are nearer elimination as a result of this action in Alabama.

If Negroes are permitted to take an active part on the juries to which the Scottsboro case is submitted, the new order will be put to a severe test. Will colored jurymen be able to rise above traditional race prejudices in passing judgment upon the accused? The court has given the Negroes of the South a powerful weapon against injustice to members of their race. With it go also new responsibilities. The system of mixed juries cannot possibly operate successfully unless the interests of justice are made paramount.

An Industrial Conference.

At the invitation of Maj. George Berry, NRA industrial coordinator, a large number of business men and labor leaders are expected to meet in Washington a month hence to discuss plans for a permanent NRA. Interest in the subject is reported to be widespread, although a few large trade associations, such as the Cotton Textile and the Iron and Steel Institutes, are listed in the doubtful class, while the Automobile Manufacturers Association is said to be definitely opposed to a conference at this time.

It is easy to understand why a few large and well-organized industrial groups, fairly successful in regulating their own trade practices, should prefer to let well enough alone. They have less to gain and risk losing a good deal more than those unorganized or ill-organized industries that are unable to suppress unfair trade practices without Government intervention. It is significant, for instance, that various retail trades which suffer especially from destructive forms of competitive price cutting are eager to participate in the coming conference, while organized labor leaders have enthusiastically accepted the invitation to be present.

The unique feature of the forthcoming conference is the opportunity offered to representatives of both labor and capital to shape the future NRA, if the consensus of opinion should favor its perpetuation. The unwieldy general conference will break up into a number of special group conferences for allied industries, and for labor groups employed by those industries. The conclusions reached and the recommendations made by the lesser conferences will then be presented to a central "council of industrial progress." The latter, designed to act as a sort of clearing house of opinion, will be intrusted with the task of formulating a program.

If any definite plan should grow out of the deliberations of this council it would be a significant coordination of industrial factions in the field of mutual legislative needs. It must be admitted that the obstacles to an accord are formidable, but it is certainly better to face the situation courageously and thrash out differences of opinion in informal preliminary discussions than to leave the responsibility for action to the Administration or to encourage representatives of labor and capital to press irreconcilable proposals upon a bewildered Congress.

Even if the conference fails to produce a final plan of action, its deliberations should serve as a useful guide to the legislators when they are called upon to decide whether the NRA should pass out completely, or survive in a new and restricted form.

New Fields To Conquer.

"She declined to wear a headgear and her straight, dark hair, Dutch-cut, was faintly reminiscent of the great old days of football, when the chrysanthemum haircut was standard equipment * * *"

And that quotation is not from the society columns, or the woman's page, but a bona-fide football item out of a most sophisticated New York newspaper. Not two months ago we ventured to suggest a new kind of sports writing. Little did we dream that the proposal would be taken up so quickly, or in this fashion.

There is nothing particularly startling in the news that "Flash" Burnham, the Mighty Mite from Middlefield, "blocked a kick and made possible the only score of the game" between two Connecticut teams of the 110-pound class. But it's enough to stop the pulse of the pigskin world to learn that "Flash's" real name is Esther! There have been Galloping Ghosts galore throughout the long history of football, but a gridiron ghostess is something else again. The groan of old-time barber shop devotees when milady first climbed up into the next chair was as nothing compared to the moans that will greet this latest feminist triumph.

When Dartmouth beats Yale it is of course natural that girls should start playing football in Connecticut. But extended to other States the idea would offer stimulating possibilities, both for sports writers and economic recovery. Much could be forgiven a flowerlike fumbler. And if enough of them take the field something like a minor boom may be expected not merely in headgear, but in such accessories as scrimmage-proof lipstick!

If the Indians were responsible for stretches of summer in autumn like the one we are now basking in, by all means bring back the Indians.—Boston Transcript.

Answer To The President.

From the Boston Transcript.

The industrialists who are to be asked by President Roosevelt to tell him why re-employment has not kept pace with increased production need not look far for an adequate explanation. The discrepancy is really due to two circumstances, one without and one within the Administration's control. The first and the less obvious is the fact that many companies, either through concern for their workers or faith in the future, never did cut their pay rolls to the full depression level.

The second factor which causes re-employment to lag somewhat behind production is a lack of confidence in the Nation's tomorrow and more especially in what the Administration will do when it has another Congress on its hands. So long as uncertainty exists in the matter of governmental interference with business, no concern will feel justified in going ahead with any considerable expansion program.

"Ought To Be A Sufficient Answer To The Question Of The Continued Popularity Of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Vote For Principle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With the coming of 1936 and the national elections, the thought comes to mind of how relatively few voters, even among the so-called intelligentsia, will take the trouble to examine momentous issues on their merits and cast their ballots accordingly. There is ample precedent, based on the simple psychology of people living and, comparatively at least, prospering in a truly representative republic such as ours, for such a premise.

In the United States, as nowhere else on this mundane sphere, it may be truly said that despite the inevitable cycles of economic depression, largely caused in this age by the increasing interdependence of all civilized nations, the average man has been able, either through his own efforts or the aid of his fellow compatriots, or both, to weather the storm well.

By average man, I mean not the man of average education, training or ability, but the man who, with his country's God-given opportunities beside him, as they were with his father and perhaps his grandfather, struggled on day by day, and so successfully, to build the Nation to what it is today, a paragon whence few flee and where most everybody is overjoyed to stay.

There is a moral in this, a moral which I should like to see such an efficient and representative journal as The Post take up and editorially develop. Exhort our people—which means the average man—to vote not for the Democratic, the Republican or the Socialist candidates, but for those men and women who most nearly, in accord with the cherished fundamentals of our Constitution and its offspring, the great Government of the United States, may be depended upon to protect, preserve and perpetuate the things that you and I are privileged to enjoy.

J. L. McKELVEY.

The Beau Saboteur?

To the Editor of the Post—Sir:

Gen. Johnson becomes grotesque as he asserts that the wave of national enthusiasm on which (as he alleges) the NRA floated in October, 1933, would have influenced the Supreme Court, his implication being that, had the case been tried at that time, a different decision would have been reached than that handed down in May, 1935.

He further implies that the litigation was deferred to its ruin. The record of the Supreme Court will not sustain the charge that it has ever gone popularizing. The General illustrates the old couplet:

Whether running, walking, writing, swinking
He excels in everything but thinking.

Our ex-horseback rider outrivals all in telling how everything ought to be done even if it must be undone. He deserves the prize of the year as the Beau Saboteur of this Administration.

Minor Corrections.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We have received a clipping from your paper, dated October 27, with the headline "The Time . . . The Place . . . The Story," from which I quote the fourth paragraph as follows:

> All of which explains why a group of electrical engineers and architects, including representatives of Cass Gilbert, Inc., the New York firm which designed the building, yesterday studied the interior of the chamber from all angles.

Will you please make the following corrections:

1. Cass Gilbert, Inc., did not design the Supreme Court Building. Mr. Cass Gilbert designed the building.

2. There was no representative of Cass Gilbert, Inc., in Washington, D. C., on October 27 to discuss the lighting of the Supreme Court Building.

3. Though one of the signatories of the contract for architectural services for the building, I was not in Washington on October 27, and no one was authorized to be in Washington to represent me.

4. Finally, my opinion concerning the lighting of the Supreme Court room is on file with the executive officer of the Supreme Court Building Commission.

30-Day Evictions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Now that Jim Farley's mule, Minnie, is on relief and provided with a home, might it not be a good idea for the Administration to desist from ejecting hundreds of families from apartment dwellings, at least until the winter is over?

The other day the inmates of the famous Rochambeau Hotel, including many aged people, and a score of practicing physicians, were, without a word of warning, given a curt summons to "scram" by December 1, to make way for governmental activities.

Even Prof. Ickes should be aware that apartments in this city, long overcrowded, are virtually impossible to obtain, especially as late as December. Where are the people to go and where are funds to be found by those in simple circumstances, to meet the heavy expense of moving?

When our Government, which many believe is rapidly being "Russianized," decides to evict armies of people, settled for the winter, would it be asking too much to allow them six months, in order to make new and difficult arrangements, rather than a scant 30 days?

Styles In Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Referring to Mr. Fahy's recent letter, attempting to draw an analogy between communism and early Christianity, will Mr. Fahy favor us with an analogy between the principle, "love thy neighbor," which he very naively assumes to be the basis of communism, and the organized and systematic assasination of religion and free opportunity in Russia today?

ANXIOUS.
Washington, Nov. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am glad that Superintendent Ballou has not allowed himself to be stampeded by the childish controversy over the teaching of communism in our public schools.

As he reasonably asks, does teaching the fact that England has a monarchical form of government mean that monarchy is advocated in this country, or that Germany and Italy have dictatorships that a dictatorship is advocated here?

Meanwhile, just what is so terrible about the principles of communism? We have a community center here and a Community Chest. We urge community spirit and sing around a community Christmas tree. We hold communion services in many churches.

Our public school systems and postoffice, our roads and sidewalks and parks are communistic institutions. Likewise our military and police services. They are maintained and supported by and for the community instead of by individuals.

Then, why make such a silly bugaboo of communism?

THERESA RUSSELL.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A further word on communism: Congress must decide what it meant by the wording of its attitude to teaching communism. I believe it meant to forbid reference to it. The corporation counsel's interpretation made a nice and natural distinction which Congress failed to make. But this feature is not my concern. There is a psychology involved which goes deeper. We face a condition, not a theory, to quote Grover Cleveland's well-known phrase.

How many teachers know the difference between the communism which the New Testament followed in beginnings of Christianity and the communism of Russia? How many know and appreciate the communism now practiced among the Zionists of Palestine, which is really "community-ism," and quite a successful plan? How many teachers have taken time and expense to visit Russia and see communism there, as it really shows its fruits? Those who teach, or attempt to teach what communism is, will speak from anti-communistic standpoints. No believer in Christian Science would permit a non-adherent of that cult to tell what its doctrines and practices are. No Catholic or Jew would be satisfied with the teaching of what these religious organizations stand for, unless spoken from a sympathetic viewpoint. Even politically minded men are quick to ask, when an expression is given on the doings of one or other of our great political parties: "What is he—Democrat or Republican?"

It is tacitly understood among us that "taking sides" bars from giving a non-partisan opinion. It is well and good to say that if a subject is taboo in our schools, the pupils will have curiosity whetted to find why it is taboo. But this suggestion proves too much. Many subjects are not taught in our schools, or even more than passingly referred to, which are of universal concern. But they are not considered appropriate or advisable for public schools. Certainly if a pupil is far enough advanced to undestand what is implied in teaching the truth concerning communism, he will be able to read that truth in our best and latest books on the subject. If communism is taught from a partisan point of view (which is almost inevitable), then Communists will be aroused all over the country to combat that teaching. The last State of our Nation will then be worse than if we had let the subject alone.

I still contend that here, as in some other matters as vital, the subject be touched upon only when necessity demands it, and then in a way not to advertise it. Communism would rejoice to be advertised by teaching what it is. And that teaching will usually be half-baked, tending to arouse what we would wish to quiet.

The Post Impressionist

Amazonian Invasion.

Post Office, Thursday.

OUR friend the Major sounds his tocsin against another Female Peril . . .

(At least, the Major considers it a peril. It is a subject upon which—for domestic reasons that need not be divulged—the Post-Impressionist entertains no opinion whatever. We give space to the Major's communication merely because he, a notoriously honest man, says his views are shared by men a-many.)

Moreover, he believes that this particular peril is a new one . . .

(For our part, we suspect that the phenomenon is of no very recent appearance. Nevertheless, we refrain from excising even this contention of the Major, because—well, because our Column courts courteous controversy.)

"I've always said," writes the Major, "that all men were fascinating to all women. But it's only lately that their fatal susceptibility has driven them into the last hiding place remaining to us.

"Of course, the trouble started away back when some nitwit male persuaded a house committee to let club members bring their wives and daughters to one dining room of a club one day in each week. Then, when prohibition came in, you couldn't keep women out of speakeasies—because, if you tried, they'd have the speakeasies raided. So, when the bar became legal again, the ladies were already entrenched there.

"Therefore, they now think they can go anywhere. And they're on the verge of taking over the common or garden variety of R. R. day-coach smoking car.

"I can't afford a Pullman and don't like one, anyhow. You mayn't smoke in a regular Pullman seat, because there are ladies present. You've got to carry your cigar a mile to the lounge car, or else smoke it among the wash basins.

"Naturally, when I take a train I make for the smoker.

"Yet nowadays there's never a smoker pulls out of the Union Station but has a bunch a women in it as soon as the conductor's made his first tour. I admit they don't go there at first; they wait till the men get too comfortably seated to be scared completely away. But then the women pile in and assert their claim to equal rights by expecting you to give up your place for them.

* * *

"Don't take my word for it. Ask any surviving male train traveler.

"Oh, yes; some of the trespassers make a bluff at smoking! They'll walk in with an unlighted cigarette in their hands—like as if it was their admission ticket which nobody has a right to refuse. Now and then, they light up. But at that, they all stay on afterward. And the majority are so brazen that they don't even strike a match.

"I've kept count. Out of all the women I've observed in smoking cars, seven and a half per cent smoke two or more cigarettes at least as far down as they can without threatening to blister the paint on their finger nails—and 40 per cent smoke one cigarette. But the other 52½ per cent don't smoke at all.

"Now, unless it's sheer fascination, there can be only one reason for that 52½ per cent, or for the other girls who stay on after they've stomped out their cigarettes. They simply want to assert what they consider their rights to go where they please and stop as long as they like—even if they don't really like it.

"No man would do a thing of that sort. Did you ever hear of a man who'd wait for his wife in the waiting-room of a beauty parlor? Men don't worry concerning their rights to equality with women. All men want to get away from all women once in a while.

"However, I am a reasonable man. I know the most formidable feminist contributor to the Post-Impressionist Column doesn't think so—I refer, of course, to Mrs. Kestler—but I am. So I make a proposal: not to the women who crowd the smoking cars, but to the railroads that run the cars.

"We have two kinds of smoking car lizardesses: smokers and non-smokers. Even Mrs. Kestler will grant that the nonsmokers have no right to enter a smoking car. But I'm generous enough to class as 'women smokers' even the forty per cent group that average one cigarette to one journey. And I say there ought to be special coaches provided wherein women smokers may smoke—special coaches.

"All I ask for my own sex is that these shouldn't be the same coaches that are provided for male smokers. All I ask for my fellow men is that we should have some little place to ourselves.

"I can conceive of only one reasonable objection to this plan," the Major concludes: "the cigarette makers will probably plead that it will reduce their trade among women."

Fair Enough

'Straperlo' In Spain.

Geneva, Nov. 6.

THE state of civilization in the Old World could hardly be shown more perfectly than in the current affair of the "ice bill" in the Spanish republic.

In Spain two members of the cabinet, including the foreign minister, have thought it best of resign, and there's great public indignation as the result of a squawk by Senor Daniel Strauss, citizen of Mexico, who introduced the game of skill known as "straperlo." Straperlo is similar to roulette, but has only 13 numbers on the board instead of the conventional 38 as in American roulette. The person who is skillful enough tol place his money on the winning number receives a generous reward from the management, but it requires great skill to select the winning number.

Sportsmen who tried their skill when the game was running at Formentor, on the Spanish island of Mallorca, are said to have put down about $100,000 more than they picked up. Coming from Mexico, it is probable Senor Strauss is acquainted with the enlightened American system of dealing with statesmen when one wishes to operate games of skill in such modern cities as Saratoga, Los Angeles and Miami Beach. In America it is customary to make arrangements with statesmen in advance, and Senor Strauss seems to have complied with the highest American ideals in this respect.

SO in due course Senor Strauss' tables began to operate at Formentor and San Sebastian, where games of skill have been barred for many years. But at San Sebastian after Senor Strauss had opened his salon at great expense hte local governor received a telephone call. Thereupon policemen walked in flourishing pistols in a vulgar manner, and Senor Strauss' salon was tossed into the street, as the saying goes.

At Formentor the pleasure continued for about a week, and Senor Strauss was able to recoup some portion of the ice bill before the governor stepped in and he again was tossed into the street. Naturally this unethical conduct incensed Senor Strauss, and he wrote an indignant letter to the President of the republic in which it appears that he was guilty of another serious breach of etiquette. In fact, Senor Strauss blew a whistle, and the President, considering this to be a very grave matter, took steps.

As the result of the President's inquiry the cabinet resigned, but all the statesmen got their jobs back again in the new cabinet, with the exception of the Foreign Minister and the Minister of Public Instruction. Senor Strauss appears to have conducted himself in an extremely respectful manner, except in blowing the whistle, which is considered an unpardonable breach of etiquette in the best circles in America.

Indeed, if Senor Strauss were to blow the whistle in the State of Florida by writing such a letter to Senor Dave Sholtz, prime minister of that ancient Spanish colony, he undoubtedly would be taken for a boat ride and fed to sharks or alligators.

• • • •

THAT is why such eminent American sportsmen as the late "Dutch" Schultz, "Al" Capone, "Little Augie" Pisano, "Johnny" Torrio and "Lucky" Luciano made their winter quarters in the country so wisely governed by Prime Minister Sholtz.

Following the blowing of the whistle, it was discovered that Senor Strauss had made an error in delivering the ice. It appears that he did not deliver the ice to the foreign minister and to the minister of public instruction, and may have been a victim of dishonest representations by persons claiming to represent them. However, the son of the prime minister and a nephew of the minister of public instruction are involved in a scandal, as the delicate diplomatic phrase puts it. And this made it embarrassing for the statesmen to continue in office. But to an American accustomed to American efficiency and straightforwardness in public affairs it is impossible to imagine that Secretary of State Cordell Hull would be forced to retire on the mere ground that his son, if any, had been involved in arrangements for operation of a game of skill.

• • • •

THE unfortunate Senor Strauss appears to have had only the most honest motives and to have been justified in his efforts to get back his money, which led him to blow the whistle to the President. But primitive Spaniards, unlike the sophisticated citizens of the old Spanish colony of Florida, have adopted an ignorant attitude and want somebody sent to prison. All Senor Strauss knows is that he is a victim of a great outrage. Senor Strauss speaks of mishaps to his straperlo studios as a result of the disaster, and he feels terrible.

It all tends to prove Alfonso was right in his contention that the Spanish people are not yet ready for self-government. In America, on the other hand, they do such things with consummate grace. Not even so much as a deputy sheriff or policeman ever was forced to resign over the ice bill in Saratoga or the old Spanish colony of Florida. But in America sportsmen rarely blow the whistle, and never to the President de la Republique.

Baldwin At Geneva

Observer Sees Tories Deserting League In Crisis.

London.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

SOME of us in England are beginning to think that Sir Samuel Hoare has thrown in his hand, that the government is making overtures to Mussolini in order to bypass the League of Nations and reap a profligate's peace.

Although its stand for the League has been weakening for several weeks, so long as Eden was plugging away at Geneva there seemed always the possibility that the government really meant what it said—that the League was the sheet anchor of its foreign policy, that it had counted the cost of full support of the collective system, and was willing to pay it. But England now fears that caution has defeated enterprise, that peace for a day has proved more seductive than peace for a generation, that the government is deserting the ship of its own scuttling.

Although the right to apply sanctions is one of the most important powers of the League, nothing has ever been done to work out the machinery by which this power could be exercised. On the contrary, the sanctions article was in the limelight in 1921 solely because its categorical "automatic" operation was being watered down, largely on British initiative, to operation after proper consideration, on a convenient date, with reasonable exceptions. So that when the present government decided to support application of the now famous Article XVI against Italy, the League had to start from scratch. And it was a speedy achievement to have drawn up the lines of economic and financial sanctions within two weeks of the verdict against Italy.

• • • •

BUT M. Laval, champion fence-sitter of the world, with his ear to the ground, one eye on the future, one on the past, and a foot in each camp, is forestalling any further League action. Acting as honest broker, he is doing his capable best to treat the affair as an Anglo-Italian quarrel, and settle it out of court. To this end he has asked Mussolini on what terms he will call off his war, invited the British to withdraw some of the fleet from the Mediterranean, in return for which Musolini has undertaken to recall one division from Libya, where it stood ready to force-march Egypt if the Suez Canal were closed. And to this end he replied to Britain's "Yes or No" question—whether France would back up the British navy if it were attacked by Italy—with a 2,000-word answer which said both yes and no, and made it perfectly clear that France will never oppose Italy with anything more drastic than economic sanctions.

The British Government's reply to these offers was to muzzle Eden at Geneva, agree to an adjournment of the Sanctions Committee, send Sir Eric Drummond post-haste to assure Mussolini that military sanctions have never been discussed, summon the British Parliament a week earlier than was expected, decide to have a general election on November 14.

That Parliament, summoned for a valedictory three-day debate on foreign affairs, listened to the government's defense of its policy, sung andante apassionato. The defense ran like this: The British government, now as ever, stands for the League; but the League is a peaceful machine, not warlike, and therefore economic and financial sanctions are the strongest weapons it can use against an aggressor. Since the League, cold-shouldered by its parent, the United States, shorn of Japan and Germany, is not what it was.

What all England is trying to understand is why the national government which three weeks ago was blowing hot on the League is now blowing so cold that the League is in danger of being frozen into inaction.

One explanation can be rejected outright. This is the argument that the Conservative Party, disguised for the moment as a national government, has simulated enthusiasm for the League with Machiavellian cold-bloodedness, garnered the support of the peace balloters was meant to be, these sanctions are likely to fail. Therefore we must reluctantly, and with tears of regret in our eyes, write off the League as a failure. At this point all government spokesmen get that keynoter throb in their voices. Since the League may fail, we must re-arm; in fact, even if the League succeeds we must re-arm in order to fulfill our peaceful collective obligations.

• • • •

SAYS Mr. Baldwin: "I will not be responsible for the conduct of any government in this country if I am not given power to remedy those deficiencies that have accrued in our defensive forces since the war." Finally, although the international crisis is not past, there is a temporary lull, and since the heavens alone know what will be the value of the national government's stock six months from now, we had better have the general election right away. Of course, Mr. Baldwin phrases this a little more politely; he says that experience has shown that there is the greatest difficulty in having an election at any other time than in the late autumn.

who voted for the League, encouraged Laval to withhold French support, and strangled Geneva, all in order to proclaim the League a failure after fair trial, and so obtain what the leader of the opposition calls an "undertaker's mandate" for rearmament.

This explanation in terms of Judas government is just too clever to be true; in spite of the love of time and the American public for the cunning and mature sophistication of British diplomacy, British politicians are noted not for their cunning but for their unconscious cerebration. They blundered into their present position just as England has blundered out of the depression into her present much-vaunted prosperity.

• • • •

THE most probable explanation is to be found in the reasons behind the sudden and unexpected decision of the British cabinet on August 22 to take the lead at Geneva in crackind down on Mussolini. Three or four members of the cabinet were for the League; several more were pushed over to temporary support of the League as a useful weapon against Mussolini's threat to the empire; and for once in his life Mr. Baldwin, who would be a pro-League man if he had the energy and were not so good a machine politician, overruled the anti-League majority and set in motion the negotiations which led up to sanctions. No doubt he hoped that Mussolini would climb down when he saw that he was up against the empire.

Unfortunately for Baldwin, Mussolini refused to climb down and at the same time took every opportunity to reassure the offended imperialists that he was as innocent as a lamb of evil intentions against the empire. Baldwin may have found that he was faced with the necessity of imposing full sanctions and blockading the Suez Canal, if he was to win the League's battle, at the same time that the small League minority in the cabinet was dwindling. Frightened by what might happen in Europe, and hard-pressed by the importunings of the party organizers and the rearmamenteers, what else would he be most tempted to do but follow the old tradition of compromise?

If this explanation is correct, we may expect mild sanctions from the League against Italy, successful intervention by Laval, a cessation of hostilities some time before the next rainy season in Abyssinia, a technical victory for the League, victory for Mussolini in the shape of territorial aquisitions and economic concessions in what may be left of Abyssinia, and, in fact, a good victory for everybody—except Abyssinia. And afterward we shall all rearm, return to military alliances, once again desert Geneva, and hope for what Winston Churchill calls five good years of peace before the day. At the moment this seems to be our most probable future unless, of course, Abyssinia is able to defeat Gens. de Bono, Graziani & Co. That would be a pretty problem for the European powers; a victory by the League against Italy is one thing, but a victory by Abyssinia is quite another kettle of fish.

• • • •

THE opposition parties are damning the government for springing a trick election on the country. The government was elected in 1931 with a doctor's mandate to keep on the gold standard, which they promptly abandoned; now, accuse the opposition, they want a mandate for peace in order to rearm. The accusation may be just, but England has a long tradition of trick elections. Witness the 1931 election, in which Ramsey MacDonald, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the great Mr. Baldwin himself waved pound notes before the trembling voters, assured them that if they returned a Socialist government and cut adrift from the gold standard their money would be as worthless as the astronomical German mark of 1923. Witness also the Zinoviev letter election of 1924, when England was riven by Hearsty anti-communist fervor, and the cash-on-delivery coupon election of 1918.

There will be mud-slinging aplenty during the campaign, for the national government offers a broad target and the slingers are vigorous. The government will be attacked for a wishy-washy foreign policy before August of this year and a half-hearted one since; for a complete lack of policy at home for unemployment and distressed areas; a dangerous policy of restriction in agriculture. The government will reply that there are a million more employed now than in 1931, that house building is a-booming, money cheap, the government credit sound, the budget balanced.

All these claims will be true; but even the sober London Economist agrees that the credit does not lie with the government. We are prosperous at the expense of the depression-ridden agricultural countries which supply us with food stuffs at such low prices that after purchasing necessary food and clothes the British consumer, with a slightly lower money income than in 1931, has a larger margin to spend on houses and cars. We are prosperous in spite of our economic policies; we have fought prosperity to the last ditch, and won by losing.

The most interesting feature of the election will be the success or failure of Lloyd George's lobbying council of action, which is attempting to do for a policy of peace and reconstruction what the peace ballot did for the League of Nations. And the most amusing will be that if the government's main plank is support of the League, and since the opposition is stronger for the League than is the government itself, the more seats the government loses the stronger its League policy will have to be.

To Thee I Swear

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

In The Berkshires.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE for a good many years has kept to itself in its New England fastness, buried by snow in the winter and bathed with a slender sun chilled by contact with the tips of the Berkshire Hills the rest of the year. Every so often it comes out of its hiding, however, and announces to the world, with a harsh and determined Yankee voice, that it is still there.

Long known as the college of the rich man's son, it has an enviable reputation as a liberal institution where they still think the teaching of Greek and Latin is more important than courses in modern marriage or home economics. It was the home of the Institute of Politics, that summer session where the better propagandists gathered before serious groups of men and women and the reporter from the New York Herald Tribune. It has remained a college and a small one and proud of its traditions of academic freedom.

Last year, under the direction of Mayor James Michael Curley, the original New Dealer, who wouldn't be sent to Warsaw and became Governor of Massachusetts out of spite, the commonwealth of Massachusetts was led into a very foolish action. Home of the patriots, scene of Bunker Hill, Shay's Rebellion and all sorts of other things that used to be taken seriously, though it is Mr. Curley and the American Legion somehow or other lost faith in its great traditions. Feeling impelled to make certain of its teachers' loyalty, they thought up a law making it mandatory for all algebra, history and home economics teachers to swear allegiance to my flag and to the country for which it stands, one Nation indivisible.

• • • •

THERE was quite a holler about this law before it was passed but the Legionnaires, better trained in politics and public speaking than the dwellers in Academe, made the most noise and the swear-allegiance bill was passed. Tuesday, as you may have read on this page, it came time for the Williams teachers to swear their allegiance, which they proceeded to do en masse, while the student body goose-stepped like good little Nazis, and the grandson of a great President paraded about waving the swastika.

The whole affair became a burlesque Roman holiday. It must have been a pathetic sight to watch those 80, more or less, bearded devotees of academic freedom filing beneath the Berkshire foliage into Griffin Hall to take their oath before a notary public under the protection of the chief of police, while the men of Williams cavorted outside, making the affair even more ridiculous than it would otherwise have been.

Massachusetts has some very fine traditions. It also has some black spots on its escutcheon, or codfish as they call it up that way. It was the home of Mr. Garrison and the other abolitionists; it is also the State which carted off Sacco and Vanzetti to the death house in Cherry Hill, just to mention one instance of Mr. Emerson's law of compensations as expressed in his home State. On the whole the finer traditions generally win out, and although certain nincompoops in the State Legislature passed a ridiculous and wholly unnecessary law, Williams College has now come along to prove that whoever said the law is an ass knew whereof he spoke.

• • • •

I FEEL rather sorry for the regimented teachers, many of whom had mildly fought the passage of this law. To be shown up by the students is never a happy thing for a professor. The mere fact that James Bryan Conant, of Harvard, has said that so long as the law exists it must be obeyed does not make the taking of an oath any pleasanter to honest men who need no notary's signature to prove their loyalty to the Nation. They must have felt like naughty little boys.

In the past, if I recall, there was a man named Thoreau who lived in Massachusetts who didn't like a certain law. So he went to jail for it. He thus became an immortal instead of merely the good naturalist that he also was. Is it that Massachusetts is getting soft? Are there no Thoreaus left to go to jail against wrongful law? Or must they leave it to the college boys to fight their battles for academic freedom through the methods hitherto reserved for class day?

Nobody, I suppose, minds having the teachers loyal to whatever it is Massachusetts wants them to be loyal to, but for the State officially so to distrust its teachers as to make them sign a pledge card is a little ridiculous, to say the least. Mr. Curley and all his friends, I wager, were taught by teachers who never took an oath. Are they the worse for it? Perhaps had these teachers of Curley's day been more interested in the fine and really great traditions, such as the Bill of Rights, than in flag waving and celebrating the Fourth of July, we might have been spared such excesses of incipient Fascism as the present loyalty-oath law manifestly is.

boyhood. I was born in Mercer County, Pa., at my grandparents' home. My parents then lived in Elba, this State, and later in Marietta. I learned to swim in the Muskingum River. Ohio is the scene of many of my happiest boyhood memories, which have been kept fresh by frequent visits during summers spent close to this fine city of Cleveland.

Another reason why I feel at home with you is that I am no stranger in chamber of commerce gatherings. I served as director of the Chamber of Commerce in Independence, my home town, for a number of years, and also a director of the State Chamber of Commerce. Unless one has sat through a director's meeting, he can have little idea of the volume of serious work and tedious detail that these men handle in the interest of the community.

The Chamber of Commerce is a world-wide institution, but I think of it as typically American. It is the American spirit in action, expressed by deeds, not words; I believe that the instinct to stand on our own feet is part of the American character, which in these days of distress holds more substantial promise of our regeneration in spirit and substance than our physical resources, our great productive capacities, and governmental plans combined.

I have been asked to tell you tonight something of what we have done in Kansas during the past few years in the way of economical and effective government. We have tried, and I believe we have, in a measure, succeeded by observing some of the fundamental homely teachings of experience. That is the explanation of what we have been able to do there. It came to us with a sense of surprise that the happenings in Kansas during the past few years had awakened so much outside interest—that its record is considered something of a phenomenon because its local subdivisions, city, county, school and township, have managed to live within their means, cut taxes and reduce bonded debt.

Frills Cut Out.

If the situation in Kansas seems unusual it is only because the type of government, which has citizen has a right to expect, has become the unusual in a day of theory and experimentation. What we have done in Kansas is what a sensible family does in the face of reduced income. We have cut out the frills. We have maintained essential services, but at minimum cost. We have insisted that every dollar buys more, not less, of government. We have tried to run all departments of government on business principles and by business methods.

The surest way either an individual or a State learns is by experience. We all admit that our modern industrial state is complicated, and far from the the simple structure of our founding fathers. But does the fact that we have changed and grown make it wise to abandon, out of hand, the course which the wisdom of our forefathers charted for us, not out of theories, but out of the stern and bitter realities of economics and statesmanship. The country is beginning to learn that government cannot change its style as easily and with as little ill effect as men and women.

If the wind rips the roof off a house out in our country, we don't tear down the walls, also, and abandon the whole structure. We put on a new and better roof—strengthening those parts which we have discovered to be weak. Similarly, we must not abandon what remains of our American institutions or jeopardize the remainder of our freedom simply because an economic storm has devastated our Nation and shaken confidence. Rather let us replace what is destroyed, rebuild what is torn away, and in so doing strengthen our structure in every way that experience can suggest. That is common sense, horse sense as we say in Kansas. Let us be certain that we are making only those changes which are real improvements—changes dictated not by wishful theory, but by the stern teachings of experience. Let us put experience, that greatest teacher of all, back on our governmental faculty.

Now, specifically, what has Kansas done?

Let me give you a compact synopsis first and the details later.

Since the peak of 1929, general property taxes in Kansas have been reduced over 32 per cent.

The cost of State government was cut 22 per cent for the biennium of 1933-34 below that of the bienniums of 1931-32.

Counties and communities liquidated $22,00u,000 worth of bonded indebtedness from 1932 to 1934, during which time new bonds, about half of which were for relief purposes, were issued in the amount of $5,000,000, leaving a net reduction of $17,000,000 in the bonded debt of Kansas counties and municipalities.

Reduction in Cost.

The per capita cost of State and local government in Kansas in 1929 was $71—in 1935 it will be approximately $52, a reduction of about $19 per capita—or more than 26 per cent.

How were these economies brought about in a period when the cry heard from every government body was that more and more funds were needed for absolutely essential services?

It was not done by executive proclamation, nor by the legislative branch of the government placing itself in subjection to the will of the executive. The credit does not belong to any one State administration nor to any one political party. It rightfully belongs to thousands of township trustees, county commissioners, school board members and city officials all over the State who were responsive to the need of their taxpayers.

In 1932, the year preceding my first year as Governor of Kansas, all State and local revenues totaled $127,000,000. By 1934, it had shrunk $30,000,000, or about 25 per cent, and was reduced to about $97,000,000. This was a period when our State did assume heavy relief burdens.

Our constitution provides that the county government must make levies and raise funds to take care of such persons as have been on relief during the past three years. Kansas has the record of complying promptly with every request of the National Relief Administrator and in co-operating fully in every way. We did not believe in putting relief in politics. We continued the relief administrator appointed by my distinguished Democratic predecessor and he is on the job today.

Throughout 1933 and 1934, according to the report of the national relief administrator, 30.6 per cent of the relief burden was financed from non-Federal funds furnished chiefly by the county and local governments. This 30.6 per cent of non-Federal funds in Kansas compares with 27 States which contributed less than 25 per cent of their own relief moneys and 14 States whose contributions to their relief funds were less than 10 per cent of their total relief expenditures. Kansas ranked fifteenth among the States in per cent of non-Federal funds used for relief during this two-year period. Despite this added burden, the tax load in Kansas was reduced.

I previously pointed out that while we were doing this, counties and communities reduced their bonded debt $17,000,000. I might add that in Kansas the only State bonded indebtedness today is in soldiers' compensation bonds, the first of which were issued in 1923. These bonds are being paid as they mature, a total of $1,750,000, being retired in 1933 and 1934.

Stresses Co-Operation.

I have already emphasized that this lifting of the tax burden was made possible by the loyal cooperation of State and local officials. It is generally conceded, however, that new State legislation adopted was a vital part of the general program of economy. The Legislature proceeded with the welfare of the State in mind and both political parties cooperated in enacting this legislation.

Three pieces of legislation may be of especial interest to you: First: "The Cash Basis Law," which prevents our spending what we do not have. Second: "The Tax Limitation Act," which limits the total amount of levy, and third: the new "Budget Law," which makes the building of governmental budgets a really democratic procedure, known to all, instead of a star chamber proceeding known only to insiders and understood by only a few of those.

Perhaps you would like a brief outline of these acts. The cash basis law is explained by its title. It puts a stop to the writing of overdrafts. All of us know how easy it is to spend more than we can afford, if we do business with a bank that permits the writing of overdrafts and allows them to pile up, without limit. The old "no fund warrant system" made possible such practices. Under that system, when a treasury became empty, officials simply issued warrants marked with the words "no funds." These warrants bore interest and were taken by banks. Presumably they were to be liquidated eventually out of tax funds. In fact, that system had encouraged local political units, which spend many millions of dollars annually, deliberately to unbalance their budget, year after year, without providing any time of reckoning. When the cash basis law went into effect it revealed an indebtedness the magnitude of which never had been previously realized by the taxpayers. It is now necessary for school boards, township officials, county commissioners and all political units therein to limit their spending to the actual income of the current year. The cash basis law has attracted much attention.

A member of Harvard University faculty declared that Kansas had blazed a new trail in legislation aimed to put local government on a business basis. When we talk of balancing public budgets, we usually think of the Federal budget or State budget. However, the seed of sound fiscal policy must be planted in the smallest political subdivisions—or it is likely not to be found at all.

Taxation must be so guarded as not to destroy that which government is designed to protect. As part of the general program our tax limitation law was codified and strengthened so as to put a new and reduced limitation upon the sum total levy which can be fixed by any particular political unit. Of course this limit can be adjusted by future legislatures as conditions may require.

New Budget Law.

The new budget law strengthened and clarified an act already upon the statute books. Under this act, the taxing unit must prepare a budget of proposed expenditures, post a copy in the community for the taxpayers to see, publish it in the local papers and hold a hearing upon it. This law tends to take budget-building out of the back room, and place it under the scrutiny of the taxpayer's gaze.

Without the cash basis law, however, the budget law would go only a small part of the way. To compel local subdivisions to build a public budget and submit it for inspection, hearing and approval—is fine. But if the subdivision is not compelled to stay within the approved budget, then only one of the two major evils has been cured. The cash basis law provides that after a budget has been submitted and a tax levy made, the subdivision cannot spend against anticipated collections, except in cases of emergency, for which expenditures must be allowed by the State tax commission. The teeth in the law are further sharpened by the provisions that any public officer who violates it is automatically removed from office.

To understand what has been accomplished in Kansas one must appreciate the innate ability of Kansas people to govern themselves. At times, under the stress of State problems, I go and stand before a great mural in one of the rooms of the Governor's office.

There is pictured a sweeping conception of the spirit of Kansas. A prairie schooner, drawn by yoked oxen, rumbles its slow way across the plain, while beside it, unafraid and uncomplaining, trudge fathers and mothers and children. Underneath are those stirring words of Whittier:

They crossed the prairie
As of old the pilgrims crossed the sea;
To make the West, as they the East,
The homestead of the free.

"The homestead of the free!" How easy it is for that homestead to become the homestead of the bound and not the free—if bad government and unsound fiscal policies saddle the homesteader with a tax load he cannot carry. That is one of the major problems today in your State and my State and a major problem of the Nation. The errors of other administrative policies may not of themselves be fatal, but the errors of an unwise financial policy have always been fatal to every government in the history of civilization.

Sound Public Budget.

We have learned in Kansas that reduction of taxes does not necessarily mean reduction in public services. We have found that a sound public budget, carefully made and rigidly adhered to, plus a well-considered tax policy, makes it possible to maintain essential government services and still keep expenditures within the bounds of citizens' ability to pay. In 1934, our low revenue year, we spent 42 per cent of the tax dollar for educational purposes, exactly the same per cent of the tax dollar we spent in 1929, our peak revenue year.

I want to stress on this point that this was not accomplished by the head of the State government; it was not done by a central government. It was accomplished by more than 8,000 taxing boards, from the State Legislature down to one-room school district boards, making separate levies for school purposes in the peak revenue year of 1929. Five years later, in the depth of a depression, and caught between droughts and dust storms, the same 8,000 taxing boards, each operating separately, set aside for school purposes the same percentage.

No order was issued, no State law directing such a division was enacted, no person, board or commission set the figure. Eight thousand and more school boards and other taxing agencies, each dealing with its own situation, attained the same combined percentage in prosperity as in adversity.

To my mind that accomplishment is more than an interesting coincidence. In it is expressed a large part of my faith in local self-government, and in the capacity of the people to govern. The combined decision of the common people frequently approaches closer to applied wisdom than the intellectual superiority of so-called leaders.

We have been through an exceptionally hard and trying period in Kansas. There are many improvements I would like to see made as soon as we can loosen our belt a little. As I said in my first inaugural address, the State which first puts its house in order will be the first on the road to recovery. We have had the same difficulties you have had, plus some very special troubles of our own. Preceding the general economic depression, we had a long agricultural depression. We suffered three years of drought, the worst recorded since Weather Bureau records have been kept.

When you think of Kansas do not think of Coronado's adventures in search of cities paved with gold, or of the bitter guerrilla warfare of the border days or of the great herds of cattle winding their way on the long trail from Texas to Abilene and Dodge. Rather picture to yourself that less dramatic but more important saga of the soil—that epic story of those men who broke the sod, who plowed the furrow long and straight, who built homes and schools with the very sod from beneath their feet, while their women made soap, dried fruit, cured meat and watched over sturdy little Kansans whom they rocked to sleep in homemade cradles.

This last is the picture of the real Kansas. That great grassy quadrangle was changed by these sturdy souls from a wilderness inhabited by the red man into the Kansas we love today.

Varied Natural Resources.

Kansas is a State of varied natural resources. From the apple orchards of Doniphan County, in northeastern Kansas, to our zinc and coal fields in the southeastern counties, or through the great grazing section of the central part of the State to the corn and wheat area which covers the entire State, Kansas is nature's storehouse. While Kansas is best advertised as a wheat State, livestock and livestock products normally account for more than 60 per cent of our farm income. Of more interest to the manufacturer, the entire south half of the State, from the east border to the Colorado line, is underlaid with cheap fuel—coal in the east, natural gas and oil in the central and western sections. No other State matches Kansas in resources of natural gas, combined with transportation facilities. Kansas ranked fourth in the production of petroleum for many years, and the western half of the State is now considered a great potential source of new supply.

But Kansas is and always will be an agricultural State essentially. It should be borne in mind that a man who owns a farm—from which he is self-sustaining, or close to it—is in a better position to weather an economic storm than any other group or class of persons.

You business men and industrialists of the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce should not think of the farmer as a man who seeks special privilege. Equality is his goal.

The farmer is rugged, self-reliant and proud of his ability to produce the necessities of life for his family and the American workers. But, the farmer is entitled to expect for his crops a fair price base comparable to other commodities.

To me the most hopeful sign pointing to a sound economic recovery is that the whole country is beginning to sense that a permanent solution of the farming problem is a national as well as a sectional question. Farming is a business just as much as manufacturing, and is just as much entitled to equal protection in the domestic market.

It is not my place here to discuss the weakness or the strength of new policies in government. I shall not attempt to characterize them as successes or failures, or as revolutionary or evolutionary. For better or for worse such laws are here. We are faced with a condition of fact, not of speculative theory. So, the major task ahead in the main is not more laws, or more programs or more experimentation, but sound common sense administration.

Problems to Meet.

Even with return of industrial activity, there will be major social, farm and economic problems to meet. We must build against a return of what we have been through these past few years. We must build on the realization that this economic situation did not come upon us suddenly, nor will we get out of it overnight. But, as I said before, while the errors of other administrative policies may not be of themselves be fatal, the errors of an unsound fiscal policy have always been ruinous to every government in the history of civilization.

The problems before us cannot be settled by any group or class. They are an obligation for all. They cannot be solved by legislative action of Congress or State assemblies alone, nor can the leaders of industry and finance and commerce single-handedly solve them. There must be a genuine co-operation with a renewed emphasis on the essential purposes of government, the protection of life and property. We must recognize that our problems have been greatly intensified by our complex industrial state and development of mechanical production. We must face the fact that our economic difficulties now have basic world-wide implications, whereas, previous depressions have been more completely localized within our domestic area.

Bearing this in mind, we should remember that assistance to the needy unemployed is not, on the one hand, a privilege or a vested right nor, on the other hand, is it charity. It is a mutual responsibility—a common obligation created by the rapidity of our growth, the complexity of our society, and by our inability to cope successfully with situations as fast as they have arisen.

Every right-thinking person sincerely desires to see the need for relief to the unemployed speedily pass away. Until that time comes, it is reasonable—and nothing less than just—that the government exert all its powers to prevent suffering among the less fortunate.

There is no reason, however, why we should not attempt to accomplish this, as far as possible, on a pay-as-you-go basis. We will then pay for our own mistakes, which is right and as it should be. We should not expect our children to pay for them. Certainly an increasing public debt burden left by us to our descendants will lessen the ability of succeeding generations to meet their emergencies. The leftover problems of our times should not be added to the new ones of tomorrow. That is not fair to the coming generations and we evade our responsibilities if we thus pass on the burden. This generation will be the first to mortgage the future in peace times.

Protection of Credit.

Furthermore, we should conduct our current fiscal affairs so that the public credit shall not be undermined. Common sense must prevail. No business can run very long and spend more than it takes in. If that should happen, the poor, the unemployed would be the first to suffer—for the government could no longer continue public aid.

Out in Kansas we try to distinguish between progress and change, to evaluate change not only in its immediate effects, but in its lasting results. It is the obligation of leadership to say "yes" to some proposals and "no" to others in a manner that will not throw the country into jitters. In the solving of old problems, we must avoid the creation of new ones. We must not confuse the immediate glance with the long-time view. Some roads lead to far different ends than they seemed to at the start. An innovation may be a backward step. This has been demonstrated in foreign countries where civil liberties have been yielded in return for economic security, without gaining economic security. Such a step in this country would be disastrous to all American ideas and traditions.

Yesterday, we were smug in our prosperity. Today, we are awake to the needs of an unsettled world. The West was built on faith, courage and the homely common sense virtues of thrift, toil and neighborly co-operation. In Kansas they remain our creed. Always the West is willing to brave the new, to meet the changing conditions and vicissitudes of our uncertain future with determination and confidence. I bespeak for the citizens of these United States a lofty spirit of patriotism, a renewed devotion to our State and Nation and their daily welfare; and a new birth of individual responsibility which shall make the safety, welfare and progress of the State and Nation matters in each citizen's own personal concern.

A Modern Motif Creeps Into Dramatic Structure of Goldwyn's "Barbary Coast"

Gold Rush Day BredGangsters, Had Its G-Men

Hecht-MacArthur Pen Hit; Notable Films Booked; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One hardly expected Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Barbary Coast" to turn out to be a gangster picture. As a matter of fact, it didn't—but it only missed by an eyelash.

That "eyelash," so to speak, was merely the business of omitting any specific designation of San Francisco's first racketeer and calling the G-Men by their earlier name of "Vigilantes."

The idea's basic structure is identical with that of the modern hoodlum story, although this fact has been skillfully disguised by an authentic reproduction of the atmosphere of the lawless San Francisco of the gold rush days by those two wizards of flamboyant effect, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur.

The salty flavor of "Barbary Coast" is so efficiently contrived that the drama desks of the local press sat in rapt attention as the picture was privately unspooled in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon. The fog, mud and murder of a wild pioneer city are perfectly simulated in this colorful subject, which, I believe, makes no pretense in the direction of historical accuracy, but aspires merely to present an entertaining fiction against a background that has not been too much overworked of late.

Printers and Police.

It may be, as has been suggested in some quarters, that the incidents of the first printing press and newspaper and the organization of the Vigilantes to bring law and order to a community not so much ruled as over-ruled, are pretty thoroughly in consonance with historical fact. However that may be, they are the signposts of the picture's most sensational climaxes.

Thoroughout the later sequences of the play there runs a thread of romance that is both picturesquely written and acted. The heroine of the gentler moments of the melodrama is Miriam Hopkins, who is perfectly equipped for this sort of thing and plays the part right down to the ground; the hero, Joel McCrea, who enacts the role of a dreamer with an imperturbable placidity that seems just a little too good to be true in a country of such rough-and-ready homicide and mayhem.

The pivotal figure, whose evil machinations motivate the action, is Louis Chamalis, impersonated with a tincture of Little Caesarian blood and iron by that ominous gelatin outlaw, Edward G. Robinson.

Has Its Comedy Relief.

Mixed with the uncouth gentry populating the dance halls and barrooms are the saner spirits represented by Frank Craven, as Col. Marcus Aurelius Cobb, journalist and publisher, and Judge Harper, the slightly pickled arm of the law, done full justice by that admirable mime, J. M. Kerrigan, once of the Abbey Theater Irish Players of Dublin.

Matching the eccentric humor contributed to "Way Down East" by Al Lydell, for example, is Walter Brennan, making an imposing personage of "Barbary Coast's ebullient nonentity, Old Atrocity, a Munchausen desperado, with a heart practically of gold.

Thus, it ought to begin to appear that "Barbary Coast" is a drama of swift action, varied types, contrasted characters and colorful design. It is all of that and will deserve the attention it will be accorded when it opens for a week's engagement following "The Dark Angel" at the Palace.

Romance was in the air literally as well as figuratively yesterday afternoon and evening. At 6 o'clock in the Hotel Willard, Miss Dorothy Rodier, long a valued attache of the Warner Brothers' local publicity department, and Walter Cersley, a veteran of the Warner managerial forces, now presiding over the destinies of the Avalon Theater in Chevy Chase, were joined in what are usually referred to as the holy bonds of matrimony. They were showered with congratulations and best wishes—not to mention rice and old shoes—by all of Washington's theaterdom. This column extends its heartiest felicitations to these old friends of celluloid days.

Hits on Horizon.

A group of productions believed to be of especial interest to Washington moviegoers have been listed by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory, for early presentation at the Earle Theater.

Foremost among these will be "Metropolitan," starring Lawrence Tibbett, scheduled to open on Friday of this week.

Next will be "Peter Ibbetson," adapted from the novel by George du Maurier, in which Gary Cooper and Ann Harding will be starred, supported by John Halliday, Ida Lupino, Douglas Dumbrille, Dickie Moore and Virginia Weidler. Another notable production from the same studio will be "So Red the Rose," with Margaret Sullavan, Walter Connolly and Randolph Scott in featured roles.

Three Warner Brothers' pictures are among those particularly stressed by Mr. Payette—"The Frisco Kid," "I Found Stella Parrish" and "Captain Blood." James Cagney stars in the first, Kay Francis in the second, and Errol Flynn in the third.

Another important booking is "A Feather in Her Hat," starring Pauline Lord, with Louis Heyward, supported by Wendy Barrie, Basil Rathbone and Billie Burke.

Several major producing companies are represented on this list. "Metropolitan" is a Twentieth Century-Fox release; "Peter Ibbetson" and "So Red the Rose," Paramount; "A Feather in Her Hat," Columbia.

A preliminary report on the actual resemblance—if any—between the Marx Brothers' "A Night at the Opera" and Lawrence Tibbett's "Metropolitan" will be possible in this space tomorrow morning, since "Metropolitan" is being privately previewed this afternoon at 1:30. On paper their synopses present almost unbelievable similarities.

Swing Your Adjectives!

A welcome visitor to this column yesterday afternoon was the veteran Sam Weller, missionarying on behalf of the new Milton Shubert production of "Swing Your Lady," the dramatic attraction at the National following next week's engagement of Max Gordon's "The Great Waltz."

Mr. Weller reveals that "Swing Your Lady," despite the fact that it affords the strange spectacle of a female blacksmith tangling with a professional wrestler, will be rather more of a production than might have been expected. The cast enlists the services of approximately 40 players. The action is disclosed in seven episodes, requiring frequent elaborate changes of sets.

There is even a hint that, in addition to being as populous as "Pride and Prejudice," to cite a convenient recent example, "Swing Your Lady" may develop something of the comedy wallop of "Three Men on a Horse."

The Washington inaugural of the play on Monday night, November 18, will be almost in the nature of a first time on any stage—but not quite. "Swing Your Lady" will be presented for a three-day "shakedown" engagement in New Haven, Conn., preceding the National opening. Just enough to tune it up nicely.

The Columbia Players, one of the Capital's foremost acting groups, will launch their fourteenth season tonight with the presentation of the Geyer-Wodehouse comedy, "Candlelight," in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. In the cast are Robert M. Miller, Dorothea, Lewis, Norman Rose, Eileen Fowler, Juliet Edes Alves, Joe Bourne, Wade Robinson and Elwood Godsall. Orris Holland directed.

Made-to-Order Drama.

J. B. Priestley, the English novelist and playwright, author of "The Good Companions," "Dangerous Corner," "Laburnum Grove" and "Eden End," has written a new play for Ralph Richardson, who now is acting Mercutio with Katharine Cornell, on tour in "Romeo and Juliet" and recently was seen on the Belasco screen in "Java Head." In London, Richardson was an outstanding success in "Eden End," produced this season in New York.

After that Priestley wrote "Cornelius" for him. This drama enjoyed a brilliant London first night, but ran a total of only six weeks. So the new play will be the second that Priestley has written especially for this able actor. It will be presented in London next spring, following the close of Richardson's engagement in Miss Cornell's company.

Priestley not so long ago stated in an interview that he considers Richardson one of the finest actors on the English-speaking stage. Those who have seen and enjoyed his work will be inclined to agree.

Eternal Unities Note.

Since that Variety Club smoker came off as scheduled in Baltimore, and Manager Hardie Meakin plans to open it at RKO-Keith's on Friday, this seems the proper time and place to ask it.

"Remember Last Night?"

That's fine. Very few do!

'Taming of Shrew'

Though performed by a cast in its early teens, Washington last evening saw a most unusual production of "The Taming of the Shrew" as the Children's Community Theater, under the direction of Helen I. Burton, presented its own special interpretation of the Shakespearean comedy before a distinguished audience of school officials in the auditorium of the Roosevelt High School.

No memorized, imitated performance was this one; rather the children's own interpretation of the Bard's famed work, a version arrived at by diligent study and analysis of the several parts, and performed with their own action and their own words.

Yet despite this freedom of playing, the youthful actors held with amazing fidelity to the spirit of the playwright and what variations may have been made in the "original script" only emphasized the reality of the drama which was being presented and the utter abandon with which the several characters were portrayed.

Indeed, few Katherines have been played with such vigor as Antonia DeLuca depicted the shrew tamed by the somewhat unorthodox actions of Jean Holzbeierlein's Petruchio. In fact, the entire performance was one of spontaneous enthusiasm on the part of the players, an ebullience reciprocated by the audience.

Following the play, Miss Burton outlined the method of training, and presented excerpts from the comedy with different players, to show the ease with which performers may be shifted.

A concert by the Washington Community Center Civic Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Samuel Ford, preceded the play.

Molly Picon

In a series of musical characterizations, performed in English and Yiddish, and in appropriate costume, Molly Picon, the distinguished Jewish actress, was presented last evening by the National Jewish Forum at the Jewish Community Center before a capacity audience. Miss Picon assisted by Jacob Kalish, raconteur, and Abraham Ellstein, pianist.

The first part of the program was especially noted for four numbers in English—"Nervous," "East Side Symphony," "The 'Wolking Goil'," "The Wailing Wall"—sung by Miss Picon. "Meine Millionen," dealing with a Jewish mother who tells how rich she is, and "Die Velt Is a Teater" were her other selections.

Four periods in a girl's life were depicted in the second part of the program in "Ot Asoi Vet Sein Mein Maidele," where Miss Picon portrayed the baby, schoolgirl, bride and wife. Her potpourri of Goldfaden melodies—"Mein Meshpuche"—was extremely diverting.

For his especial part of the program, Mr. Ellstein offered two selections, "Yoshke Furht Aveck," a piano paraphrase on an old Jewish folksong, and "Roschinkes und Mandlen," a paraphrase on a Goldfaden melody.

Traveling over the world, collecting anecdotes of Jewish life, Jacob Kalich turned back to the audience many a hilarious example of what he terms "Jewish Humor," a type of story-telling he has created.

Blackfriars

Smoothly performing a comedy of typical Irish life—the sort of drama distinguished by Dublin's Abbey Players—the Blackfriars Guild presented on Monday and Tuesday evenings at St. Paul's Auditorium Lennox Robinson's "The Whiteheaded Boy."

An exceptional stage setting augmented the histrionic effects of the company, of which Teresa Wilson, as Aunt Emma; John J. Wilson, as Duffy, and Clarence J. Wittler, as George Geoghegan, deserve especial commendation for their performances, marked by professional precision.

John Mann, in the title role, seemed to be somewhat at a loss as to the full possibilities of the youngest son who had been the principal beneficiary of the family's largesse. Jeanne Bateman, as the doting mother; Madeline O'Brien Fennell, Margaret M. Myers, Mary Lamb, and David J. Keogh, as other members of the family; Kathleen Crowley, as the maid; Marguerita D. Nordstron, as Delia Duffy, and John Donnelly, as Donough Brosnan, completed the cast.

Angela Keir directed the play, which marks a high point in the Blackfriar's career.

Drops Her Sloe-Eyed Exoticism

In all of the flattering comments that have been made concerning Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Dark Angel," currently on view at Loew's Palace Theater, opinion is unanimous that Merle Oberon, minus her Oriental eye make-up and tip-tilted brows, does the finest work she has brought to the screen, in the role of Kitty Vane. An attractive likeness of Miss Oberon as she really is appears above. She is cast opposite Fredric March and Herbert Marshall.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Nov. 6.

DICK POWELL is in his dressing room having lunch.

He is supposed to be back on the set in five minutes. He stops eating and races toward the set. He is always punctual.

He is not temperamental on the set. Directors have no trouble with him; he obeys instructions.

Yet, recently the agreeable Powell revolted. He demanded more money.

He is one of the biggest box office attractions at Warners, with one of the smallest salary checks. He is worked often. He won his fight. He has been given a new contract with a substantial increase.

Unlike many other performers, he doesn't believe he is a fine actor. However, his performances are improving. He will watch the troupers working in the flicker with him and take lessons. He studies music with a singing teacher. He hasn't been content merely to read his fan mail and believe it.

• • • •

His full name is Richard Ewing Powell, and he was born on November 24, 1904, near Mountain View, Ark., ten miles from the nearest railroad. He is the first of his tribe to go on the stage and appear on the screen.

He is 6 feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He doesn't look his weight. He has blue eyes and wavy brown hair. It takes just a little effort on his part and the waves appear.

He came to Hollywood to play in a flicker called "The Crooner," but because he had been a crooner he wasn't given the role. Not the type, they said.

He continues to study his lines for his role in a picture and comes on the set prepared, although he has learned that the lines will be rewritten on the set.

He has a name for being a romantic leading man off the screen, as well as on. Yet, he doesn't go out when he is appearing before the camera the next day. He built hi sown house on Toluca Lake. It is near the golf course. The golfers don't disturb him. He disturbs them—for they can hear him vocalizing.

• • • •

HE is generally singing, good and loud. In the house, in his dressing room, walking along a street, he will practice singing. On the set he will sit and listen to the playback of his recording of a song. He says he listens to his singing as an audience does.

His house is neatly furnished. The feature of the place is a large playroom, which has a grill, a bar nad a piano. He likes to have a few friends over and have a musical evening. When he really likes a person he has him—or her—over for dinner and cooks the meal himself. When he cooks the meal for the gal, it's really a romance. He is a good cook.

He takes dancing lessons. He is busy with the radio and pictures, but he always manages to escort a girl about town.

• • • •

He has been married. He is divorced from Mildred Maund. She disliked theatricals and wanted him to quit it. He didn't. She is now residing in Houston, Tex. After he became a movie star, she wrote to him and asked for an autographed photograph. That's doing all right.

For a fellow who has been around, and who is supposed to know the answers, he is naive. He believes most every one and believes practically everything.

He likes to go about with opera singers. He studied and wanted to be one. He enlisted in the National Guard when a youngster, because he wanted to sing in a show they were putting on. He sang—but he also did plenty of military training.

• • • •

THROUGH the courtesy of the Government, Warners sent him to both West Point and Annapolis, which is unique.

He doesn't read many books. He reads newspapers and magazines. He likes to go to the movies, and when he goes with a girl he holds hands.

He takes his movie career seriously. He knows many exhibitors personally and corresponds with them, for he values their comments on his flickers. He visits the exhibitors when he is in their town, and entertains a few when they come to Hollywood. He pays great attention to his fan mail and really answers it.

He plays a piano in almost every flicker, but he doesn't know how to play a piano.

He sleeps in pajamas and always wears the jacket and trousers. He is generally modest. He has a bed which was built especially for him. There is a radio near it. He likes music in bed.

School Band to Play.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 6.—The Waynesboro School band will present an Armistice Day program in the Arcade Theater here Sunday afternoon, according to an announcement made yesterday by Director Lynn G. Brenneman. The concert is the first of a series of Sunday recitals to be presented by Waynesboro musical organizations during the coming winter months.

Clothing Shop Offers Frocks In Half Sizes

Smart Designs In Many Styles and Fabrics Are Being Shown.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S A SAD, sad story about Mrs. Five-Feet-Five who simply couldn't buy a dress to fit her. She was, say, a wee bit stocky and all the dresses she tried on had a way of binding across the shoulders and being too tight across the hips. Besides, they were all too long. Time after time she had bought a dress as a last resort and paid for expensive alterations only to find that it never looked quite right.

Months of these wardrobe difficulties plunged her into deep dejection. "I'd rather have a tooth pulled," she said, "then hunt for a dress to fit me!"

And then she found a silver lining to her cloud. She learned about the small shop downtown which specializes in half-size dresses. How thrilled she was when she discovered she could try on a dress that fitted as though it had been made for her!

And not only that. The dresses here were styled to give her a sylphlike form. It was such a relief to slip into a positively stunning frock, half fearfully look at herself in the mirror, only to find that she seemed slender by inches.

When she told her friends of her discovery she said she had been dreadfully afraid that dresses designed for women her size would be hopelessly matronly looking. "But they aren't at all," she assured them. And they could see from the smart brown frock she was wearing that this was true. It was a stunning dress, wrap-around style, with a becoming gold metal cloth collar.

"This was the first dress I bought there," she explained. "I never can resist wrap-arounds. But, of course, there are hundreds of other styles. And all the new fabrics. Drizzle crepes, friscas (silk and wool combinations), camel hair suedes, matelasses. Oh, just everything!"

She forgot to add that the dresses range in price from around $7 or $8 to $16.50.

Modern Hand Mirrors.

ONE OF the most helpful aids to beauty that has appeared this year is the strikingly modern hand mirror, 9 inches around. On one side it's just plain mirror. On the other side, there's a magnifying mirror.

It's this magnifying side that does things for you. Just try it! Put on your powder, rouge and lipstick, just as you usually do, and then glance into this tell-tale reflector. You'll see an enlarged close-up that will amaze you. You would never dream that make-up could seem so haphazardly applied. Now, next time, put on your make-up with the aid of the magnifying mirror. When you look at yourself in the regular mirror you'll marvel that rouge and powder and cosmetics could do so much for you. It's really the way they were applied. The magnifying mirror enabled you to do a strictly perfect job.

Streamlined Desk Sets.

CONGRATULATIONS to the buyer for the gift section in a downtown store! She scores again, this time by being the first in town to introduce the new streamlined desk sets. Without exaggeration, they look as though they'd set you back a pretty penny. As a matter of fact, they cost only $1.

Both the long, pointed handle pins and the square holders are ultramodern in design. They are sure to give an air of smartness to your desk.

They're practical, too. Nonbreakable and nontarnishable. They come in colors, and in combinations of black and chrome.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Proposes Peace Plan

MISS OPAL GOODEN

Women Urged To Wage Peace Fight at Polls

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SCOUTING methods whereby workers for world peace have charted their course in the past, and declaring "peace at any price is not our aim," Miss Opal Gooden, of the National Council for Prevention of War, yesterday told how the Untied States can stay out of war now, and preserve peace permanently.

"We have been passive in our desire for peace before," she said. "We have been too sweet about it, have soft-pedaled action and sat back waiting for peace to come and stay as a matter of course. Now, however, we're going to fight for it. Not with machine guns and men, but with votes."

As director of peace-action in Wisconsin, Miss Gooden has translated some of her ideas into a program already well under way. "It all starts with individuals who are peace-minded," she explained. "Their sentiments must become politically significant. A strategy that political bosses have never neglected is working with precincts and wards as the keystones of political strength. Beginning in precincts and wards with our neighbors who are against war, we can, by means of nonpartisan political strategy, help nominate and elect candidates who will vote in Congress for measures that strengthen peace and oppose measures that lead toward war.

Would Sound Out Candidates.

In this connection she pointed out that "individual American citizens do not declare war nor determine American foreign policy. Yet we do elect 532 men and women to act as our spokesmen. If we find out definitely how candidates stand on peace policies before election time, we shall then know how to vote."

She mentioned that in the past attempts had been made to work peace planks into platforms when political conventions were in session. "But that is much too late," she said. "The foundation must be laid earlier than that, and should have its strength, not in any one political party, but by embracing all of them."

Miss Gooden is convinced "another war means Fascism for this country because our present Government will not stand the strain of another conflict. Working to prevent war, making sacrifices for peace just as we have been forced to make them for war, will insure the preservation of our Government with its orderly society in which men rather than property come first."

A tall Texas girl with finely chiseled features, blue eyes and a chin denoting determination, Miss Gooden further explained she could not look back upon a brilliant or futile record of work for peace. She was in elementary school when the last war ended.

Teach, Think and Preach.

"Another war would destroy everything I now hold dear," she said. "I don't want a role in the stupidly tragic drama of another 'lost generation.' We younger voters must do what older ones have failed to do in the past. We must teach, think and preach world peace. We must vote for peace-minded Representatives and Senators; we must learn all we can about important peace bills scheduled for the next session of Congress, and we must let our Congressmen know before they go back whether we favor them or not. We must not only want peace but say 'peace' with our votes."

Peace for the United States today hinges chiefly on absolute neutrality, in her opinion; and she is convinced our country could do much to prevent war among other countries if it raised an embargo not only on munitions, but any products that help sustain people of a warring country.

Food Handlers Are Confronted By Germ Peril

Endameba Often Persists and Entails a Lot of Suffering.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

TO most of us the intestinal tract is unexplored territory. We have never had occasion to think about it because it has failed to trouble us. It is probably a good thing that we live from day to day unaware of the remarkable and intricate reactions taking place within our bodies. It is only when something goes wrong that the messenger pain demands attention.

There are many types of intestinal infection. Just at this time of the year we should be on the alert to detect typhoid and paratyphoid as well as those inflammatory conditions caused by intestinal parasites. To the present day protection of our water supplies we owe our relative freedom from typhoid fever.

A parasitic intestinal infection caused by the endameba histolytica has existed within the boundaries of the United States since the Spanish-American War. More cases entered the United States with the returned soldiers from the Philippines than had come previously from all other sources.

How prevalent is the endameba now? A distinguished authority, Charles F. Craig, notes that of more than 50,000 individuals who have been carefully examined 10.1 per cent were found to be infected. If we assume that this ratio is double the normal incidence of the infection it would still give us 6,000,000 persons harboring the parasite.

The fortunate thing about the endameba is that the organism causes symptoms in 50 per cent or less of the infected individuals, although symptoms may develop at any time or as long as the parasites are present in the intestinal tract. If they are found the safe rule is to treat the patient as though serious disease were in the offing.

The question as to just how the endameba is spread is important. Only the parasites that contain cysts are in the infective stage. If these cysts are swallowed in food or drink they pass through the stomach and the small intestine undigested, and it is only when they reach the colon that the cyst walls become dissolved, liberating the young amebae. The region of the appendix is a common site for propagation. As soon as they are released some of the young forms penetrate the mucous membrane of the intestine; others remain in the intestinal tract and produce cysts, and thus the life cycle is repeated.

We must recall that the cysts are discharged from the bowel of infected persons. Food or drink may thus be fouled by flies or through handling by unclean carriers. Whenever sewage has access to drinking water contamination is possible. The safety of communities in this respect depends entirely upon the proper disposal of sewage. Public water supplies where the water is filtered through layers of sand are safe as far as the endameba is concerned.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THERE'S a luxurious sound to the word nursery, but actually a nursery isn't a luxury—it's a necessity. Yet a lot of homes that have guest rooms can't spare space to keep the baby comfortably established with his own things all together, but instead try to tuck him in odd places all over the house. A nursery is easier on him as well as less wear and tear on mother.

* * * *

M. C. WRITES: Will you help me plan a nursery for our tiny baby? I would like something different yet still dainty. Besides I'd like a plan that will still be good when the baby is older. All I can think of is pink rabbits and blue ducks which my husband says sounds too much like d. t.'s!

ANSWER: Why not have buttercup yellow walls and furniture painted aquamarine—that's charming and not too usual for a nursery. Have crisp white organdy curtains, a flowered chair and linoleum in deeper blue inlaid with toys that your husband will approve of. You could repeat the floor motifs for the wall effectively if you like. Cut the same designs out of colored oilcloth or permatex and paste them up with rubber cement. You'll need a screen too to put around the crib to keep off draughts. This might be in the flowery pattern you have for the chair, or it could be buttercup yellow and decorated with the same oilcloth toys.

How to Find Syndicate Market for Writings Is One Problem of Reader.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have some ideas which I would like to write up for syndication. Could you tell me where I should send them? Also, I wonder if you could tell me some interesting games, requiring some mental ability, which two persons may play. My husband and I like bridge very much but there are many times when we would enjoy some good two-handed games—card games or other games. Thanking you for any help you can give me, I am, sincerely,

M. N. B.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR M. N. B.: As a would-be writer for syndicate markets, I suggest you inquire of Editor & Publisher, 1700 Times Building, New York City, if there is available for purchase a copy of the twelfth annual Editor & Publisher Syndicate Directory. It was issued September 28, 1935. If any copies are for sale over and above those prepared for the regular subscriber list, one will cost you about 10 cents. Another good magazine for would-be writers to study is Author & Journalist, Champa street, Denver, Colo. Still another, Writers' Digest, can be bought from local newsstands which specialize in a wide variety of magazines.

* * * *

I am no authority on interesting and mentally exacting two-handed games, but others whose judgment I respect list the following as engrossing games for two: Chess, checkers, dominoes, double solitaire, backgammon, cribbage, croquinole, ping pong and honeymoon bridge.

* * * *

Any bookstore or library should be able to furnish you with books on games and their rules, and the counters of many department stores offer a wide variety of games for sale.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Piquant Sauce Adds to Relish Of Meat Dish

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE MAIN DISH of a meal, particularly the meat course, is frequently made more attractive when accompanied by a side dish that has been chosen because it will provide a direct contrast of flavor. A piquant sauce—tartar sauce, for example—is served with delicate, flaky white fish, a minted sauce, jelly or ice is chosen to enhance the flavor of lamb, cranberry sauce or relish blends exceptionally well with fowl, especially chicken and turkey, and so on.

Both the main dish for luncheon and dinner in the following suggested menus for today may be enhanced by an accompanying dish of contrasting flavor. The molded ramekin of white fish suggested for luncheon gains flavor as well as color when served with pimiento sauce.

The pleasantly tart flavor of apple rings is in direct contrast to the sweet savoriness of the crown roast of pork suggested in the dinner menu.

Deceit on Pain Of Operations Destroys Faith

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SAM WAS to have his tonsils out. He was only 4 and somewhat nervous at the prospect of going to the hospital, so he made careful inquiries about the operation beforehand. Finally he came to his mother as a court of final appeal.

"Will it hurt, mother?"

"No, dear," was the answer. "Not a bit." So the small boy went under the anesthetic quite calmly, further cheered by the promise of unlimited ice cream.

His mother had told him the literal truth. The operation in itself did not hurt, but she had forgotten to mention the pain which came afterward. Sam, who was unable to make such fine distinctions, felt that she had deceived him, and never put the same trust in her statements again.

It is not necessary to dwell on the unpleasant side of an operation, but it is wise to prepare a child to some extent for what is likely to be. If his mother had said, "You won't feel the actual pain of the operation, but you will have a sore throat afterward," Sam would not have had the feeling that he had been misled.

It is not necessary to dilate on the sore throat to such an extent as to scare the child, but it is not kind to lure him on with the promise of no pain and plenty of ice cream.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Mrs. Robert Clement Watson Makes a Specialty of Divinity Fudge.

By Pattie Ellicott.

FROM GLAMOROUS days as the popular daughter of a United States Senator, through World War work as an officer in the National Service School and later as a Gray Lady at Walter Reed Hospital to the present time, Sarah Latimer Watson (Mrs. Robert Clement Watson), one of the leaders among the young matrons of Washington, has been renowned for her achievements in fudge making.

Three children, Robert Clement Watson, jr., Olive Patten Watson and Alice Watson, who make merry the hospitable home of the Watsons at Silver Spring, Md., will assure you that "Mother" has not lost her cunning in candy making. No matter how many social engagements may be on the calendar for the popular young matron, she is never too busy to make fudge for the children.

G.O.P. Gains Single Seat InLegislature

Virginia Returns Two to Senate, Elects Six to House

Democrats Also Lose 1 Place to Independent, Dr. Witten.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—The Virginia General Assembly of 1936 will be composed of 131 Democrats, 8 Republicans and 1 Independent, complete unofficial returns from yesterday's election revealed tonight.

The Republican Party held its own in the Senate by electing two members, and made a net gain of one member in the House. The Democrats, in addition to losing one House seat to Republicans, lost the Buchanan-Tazewell-Russell senatorial contest, on which attention of the entire State was centered, to Dr. J. W. Witten, Tazewell physician and Independent.

Layman, Dry, Beaten.

Chief among the victims of upsets was Senator George W. Layman, of Craig, long-time dry leader and author of the Virginia prohibition law which was repealed in 1934 by the liquor control act, which Senator Layman also aided in drafting. He went down in defeat before Thomas J. Wilson, Republican, of Clifton Forge, a member of the House of Delegates in the last session.

Dr. Witten, a member of the House of Delegates for the last four years, who sat in the Democratic caucus, announced as an Independent this year and defeated Harry C. Stuart, of Elk Garden, a nephew of former Gov. Henry Carter Stuart and Democratic nominee for the Senate, by a majority of approximately 300 votes. Stuart had majorities in his home county of Russell and in Buchanan County, but Witten's 2,234-vote lead in his own county of Tazewell was more than enough to overcome the Stuart lead. Complete unofficial figures gave Witten 7,175 votes to 6,669 for Stuart.

"A Country Doctor."

Witten, who calls himself a "country doctor," in the "Fighting Ninth" Congressional District has combined politics with his business career.

Democrats found some compensation for the defeat of Senator Layman in the victory of Judge R. R. Parker over the veteran Republican, Senator Roland Chase, in the Wise-Dickenson District. Virtually complete returns showed Parker an easy victor.

Taylor G. Vaughan, Republican Senator from the Carroll-Grayson District, was re-elected over John C. Phipps, Democrat.

Although Wilson was elected to the Senate, Democrats elected a Democrat to succeed him in the House from the Alleghany-Clifton Forge district, B. C. Goodwin defeating R. A. Ware, Republican.

Republicans Retaliate.

To compensate for the Alleghany-Clifton Forge district, the Republicans elected S. R. Crockett to the House over M. H. Jackson, Democratic incumbent in Wythe, and sent John W. Morrison, incumbent, and Howard S. Ziegler, both Republicans, to the House from the Rockingham-Harrisonburg district. The latter district was represented in the last session by Morrison and J. O. Beard, a Democrat, who was one of the unsuccessful Democratic candidates yesterday.

J. W. Russell, a Republican, defeated H. L. Lyon, incumbent Democrat, for the House in Carroll County, and W. H. Perry and Joseph C. Hutcheson, Republican incumbents, were returned from Scott and Shenandoah counties. Dr. H. T. Smith, Republican House member from Grayson, was the only member of his party unopposed for a legislative seat.

Democrats Win Elsewhere.

Democrats swept everything before them in other legislative contests, winning 15 seats involved in 11 contested senatorial districts. Republican opposition was defeated in four of the districts; Independents were defeated in three others, and Socialists were routed in the remaining four.

Thirty-four seats were involved in the 23 House districts swept by the Democrats, Republicans furnishing the opposition in 12 of the districts, Independents in seven and Socialists in three.

Democratic nominees were unopposed in 21 senatorial and 54 House districts, largely in the eastern section of the State.

In Patrick County, where no primary was held, the fight was between two Democrats, with C. L. Spangler, former member of the House, defeating T. J. George, the incumbent.

The Wilson-Layman contest, in addition to being a center of interest throughout the entire State, was one of the closest senatorial contests. Complete unofficial returns gave Wilson 5,713 votes to 5,329 for Senator Layman, a majority of only 384.

Still Found, Man Held.

Frederick School Board Firm In Controversy With 'Strikers'

Plans to Consolidate One-Room Institutions Held in Abeyance.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 6.—The Frederick County Board of Education has "no intention" of yielding in the controversy brought about by consolidation of the Broad Run School and the subsequent "strike," County Superintendent Eugene W. Pruitt said today.

Pruitt made his announcement after the county board of education had discussed the status of the seven remaining one-room schools in the county. He said the board has no immediate plans for consolidation of the present one-room schools.

The Broad Run School was consolidated with the Middletown School and some parents of the former institution went on "strike," declining to send their children to the consolidated institution. The "strike" continued for seven weeks and the matter came to a head when three of the parents were arrested for violation of the State compulsory attendance statute.

They demanded a jury trial and the case is set to be heard here Monday.

Pruitt said the Broad Run School was the last one-room institution in the Middletown Valley to be closed and that consolidation was withheld until a good road was completed from Broad Run to Middletown.

The superintendent said there were 96 one-room schools in Frederick County in 1923, as compared with 7 this year.

The radio comedians were the guests of Lawrence Ritchie, former secretary to Herbert Hoover. Upon their arrival here they were greeted by a throng of school children.

France to Toss Hat in Ring if Nice Stays Out

Former Senator Says He 'May Be Compelled' to File in '36.

By the Associated Press.

Port Deposit, Md., Nov. 6.—Former Senator Joseph I. France asserted today that if Gov. Harry W. Nice "or another worthy candidate" did not file in the Republican presidential primaries, he himself "may be compelled to do so."

France said in a statement issued from his home here that he might be forced to file in order to "make the fight" for the principles of Theodore Roosevelt.

Asserting they did not "measure up" to these principles, France said he would oppose Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., or former President Herbert Hover if either filed in the primaries. Hoover defeated France for the nomination in 1932.

He said he agreed with Fish that "we must choose for the Republican standard bearer next year a man imbued with the spirit and ideals of the late Theodore Roosevelt."

"I am certain," he added, "that neither Herbert Hoover nor Hamilton Fish measures up to Mr. Nice's specifications. There is nothing in the record of either of them to indicate the slightest conception of the couse of, or the American remedy for, the present deplorable situation of the world."

The former Senator explained he previously had said his plans depended on whether or not Gov. Nice "would be an active candidate in the primaries for the Presidency."

"I give notice now, however," he said, "that if either Hoover or Fish should file in the Presidential primary States, he will find himself opposed by one who sincerely desires a candidate devoted to the ideals of Theodore Roosevelt."

Plane Builder Views Industry As Stabilized

Martin Launches Philippine Clipper; to Deliver 3 Bombers a Week.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—Launching a new clipper ship today, Glenn L. Martin, airplane builder, viewed the aeronautics industry as having "taken on a more stable condition" with a "continuity of production" in sight.

The ship that began her air and water tests today at Martin's Middle River plant was the Philippine clipper. It is a sister ship of the China and Hawaiian clippers built for Pan-American Airways' transoceanic passenger service.

"Both foreign and local governments, as well as business, have come to realize that aviation has reached the stage of dependability, for national defense as well as for commercial uses, and beginning this year aeronautics has taken on a more stable condition," he said.

Martin disclosed that beginning next week his plant would deliver three standard type bombers each week to the United States Army until his contract is fulfilled.

"Meanwhile," he said, "out at Dayton, Ohio, our 'mystery bomber' is undergoing the most rigorous tests the Army engineers can devise."

He declined to comment further on the competition the Army is supervising between bombers of various makes.

As the huge "Philippine" clipper nosed into the water of the Chesapeake Bay for her first test off the ground, Martin said he planned to build even larger clippers.

He envisioned a ship much larger than those now under construction and able to carry a 50 per cent heavier load without larger crew. The present ships carry 4,000 gallons of fuel for a 4,000-mile cruising range.

Martin said he planned to close his Washington home and "move here.

"Seems as if I'll have a steady job down here," he said, "and I'll be closer to it."

Smith Upsets Politicians in Maryland 6th

Rockville Man in Race for G. O. P. House Nomination.

Changes Picture for 5 in Washington, Allegany Counties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 6.—When Harold C. Smith, Montgomery County attorney and Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth District three years ago, announced his intention this week to seek the nomination again next year, he threw somewhat of a bombshell into the ranks of prospective candidates.

At least five other prospective candidates in the counties of Allegany and Washington had looked upon Montgomery and Frederick Counties as battlegrounds for candidates from other counties. Smith's declaration, however, has changed the situation, for it is assumed by party chiefs that the Rockville man first sounded out Montgomery County leaders before casting his hat in in the ring.

But his action is expected to bring into the open some of the others who for months have been sounding out sentiment and building their own fences.

Factions Divided.

Washington County has two who are expected to announce their candidacies soon. They are Mayor I. M. Wertz and State Senator Ernest W. Miller. Efforts of Wertz supporters to have the Senator submerge his aspirations so that the county vote will not be split have thus far been unsuccessful. Neither apparently has the support of either of the two factions of the party in the county, notwithstanding the fact that it had been reported that the Nice-Tabler faction would back the mayor. While this faction exerted a powerful influence in the last municipal election here which swept Dr. Wertz into the mayoralty, it is understood that it now is giving the mayor no encouragement whatsoever in his aspirations to go to Congress.

There were some party chieftains who believe Perry Nicklin, Allegany County treasurer, who has been often mentioned as a possible candidate, but who has as yet not declared himself, is likely to receive more support in the five counties of the District than any other individual mentioned to date.

Ignored in Patronage.

Nicklin's business also takes him into each of the five counties, and he is popular with leaders of both factions, whereas neither of the two Washington countians probably could expect the support of both the Tabler and so-called Old Guard factions, which are farther apart right now than they ever have been because of the Nice administration ignored the Old Guard faction entirely in patronage.

Nicklin, party leaders point out, will not have clear sailing in his own county, because of the almost certain entry of State Senator Robert B. Kimble, of that county, for the nomination. Kimble apparently is assured of the support of labor, a cause which he has championed in the General Assembly. A. Charles Stewart, president of the Allegany County board of commissioners, also mentioned, is expected by some party leaders to announce his candacy shortly.

Visited Counties.

It is said that Smith, who announced himself last year as a candidate, only to withdraw when the late Fred N. Zihlman entered the race, was given assurance at that time by some leaders that they would look more kindly upon his candidacy at a later date. The Rockville magistrate has visited each of the counties within the last two months and is said to have reminded them of this promise.

But the Republicans are looking for a winning candidate for next year, believing that many Democrats, who are known to be hostile to some of the legislation sponsored by Representative David J. Lewis, Democrat, will vote against Lewis if a popular candidate is selected to oppose him.

Smith's candidacy undoubtedly will force the hand of others, each of whom believed he is the nominee who can bring the Sixth District, so long represented by the late Fred N. Zihlman, back into the Republican fold.

C. of C. Begins Drive to Shift State Offices

Change From Baltimore to Annapolis Favored to Save Rentals.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Nov. 6.—The Annapolis Chamber of Commerce today began a drive to have all State agencies and offices maintained in Baltimore, at a rental cost of $210,000 a year, moved to Annapolis, the State Capital.

The Maryland Chamber of Commerce and the local Civitan Club have pledged support of the proposal in the interests of economy and to centralize State departments here.

Before instigating the campaign, the local chamber conducted a survey of floor space rented outside of State buildings in the Nation.

Forty-five States reported all business was transacted within State buildings, with no rental fee paid outside. The other States maintained less than 1,000 square feet of rental space, excepting Maryland.

This State uses 140,000 square feet of office space in Baltimore, paying $1.50 a square foot annually. Harry S. Kenchington, of the local chamber of commerce, estimated there are enough State-owned buildings here to house all State offices and departments.

"If not, new construction to bring about centralization of all State departments here could be liquidated, with the State paying no more annually than it does now for office rent," he said.

The plea is being sent to chambers of commerce throughout the State, and to civic and service organizations in Maryland.

Nice Facing New Relief Fund Crisis

Special Session Is Held Possible Following U. S. Ultimatum.

Greenstein Fears Wide Distress if Money Is Not Raised.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—Maryland's most persistant governmental problem, that of relief, presented further new angles today to worry State and relief officials.

Faced with the Federal ultimatum that the State would not receive any further funds for relief after December 1, Gov. Harry W. Nice immediately began another canvass of legislative and relief leaders to determine if a special session of the General Assembly is needed.

Only Monday the legislative leaders advised the Governor they did not think a session should be called before January or February. Since that time, however, the Federal ultimatum came through.

State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein stated his case as:

"With colder weather and increasing needs it is important that something be done.

"We have only sufficient funds on hand to last a few weeks longer. And, unless money is forthcoming from some source, there will be untold suffering and distress for thousands of people in this State.

"This, of course, is unthinkable and must not under any circumstances be permitted.

"I have received a telegram from Washington which states that no person not on relief prior to November 1 can be placed on WPA. This greatly aggravates our already serious problem, particularly in the counties where our relief load is now at a low point to seasonal employment."

Yesterday the Governor announced the appointment of William J. Casey, senior vice president of the Maryland Trust Co., as chairman of a special committee to study relief needs. The committee will make recommendations for handling of the relief problem to the Governor, who will submit them to the Legislature.

West Virginia Sees Comeback Of Apple Show

H. W. Miller Crowned King Before 1,500 at Martinsburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 6.—The West Virginia Apple Show, tried as an experiment this year and meeting with so much support that those in charge expect to see it resumed as an annual affair after its past 20-year lapse, swung today into a program of music. Tomorrow's closing session will include addresses by John J. Cornwell, of Baltimore, former Governor of West Virginia, and a former president of the fruit society, and Representative Jennings Randolph.

Today's program was presented by the Glee Club from Storer College at Harpers Ferry and the Berkeley County Farm Woman's Club Chorus and male quartet, assisted by Mrs. D. H. Rodgers, this city, in a series of readings.

The management said approximately 3,000 persons had visited the show, whose exhibits are limited to West Virginia grown fruit.

Fifteen hundred were present last night at the opening when Harry W. Miller, of Pawpaw, was formally crowned as "King of the West Virginia Apple Realm," receiving his crown from Gov. H. G. Kump of West Virginia. Miller, whose approximate production of 100,000 bushels of apples last year won him the title as the largest grower of apples in the State, made his headquarters at the show today.

Free State's Deficit 'Cut' By $138,000

Maryland Estates Levy Yields Only ¼ of Expected Sum.

$581,000 Still Involved in Closed Banks, Comptroller Reports.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—Maryland's deficit for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1935, was $138,000 less than had been anticipated.

This cheering news was released today by William S. Gordy, jr., State comptroller. At the same time, Gordy said that the estates tax, whose yield had been estimated at $1,000,000, had actually brought in only $225,000.

Last winter State fiscal officials estimated the 1935 fiscal year's deficit at $2,300,000. Part of this was due to State funds being tied up in closed banks, and another part to taxes yielding less than had been expected.

Lose on Bank Closings.

The Legislature provided $2,300,000 to make up the deficit, and $1,500,000 more as working capital. The working capital fund is now represented by a difference of $1,114,000 between assets and liabilities, and another $524,000 in interest on deposits in closed banks. The total of $1,638,000 is $138,000 more than the $1,500,000 provided by the Legislature.

The amount represented by certificates of interest in the deposits of banks was secured by the National Surety Co., which is now in receivership, Gordy said. The total amount involved in banks under receivers is $581,000, but the smaller amount was insured by National Surety.

"Actually," Gordy said, "we wind up with no deficit and a surplus of $1,114,000, plus certificates of indebtedness for $524,000, or $1,638,000. The expected deficit was $138,000 lower than we expected."

Estates Tax Yield Off.

In years past, the comptroller said, the estates tax has brought in as much as $2,600,000. The deficiency in the yield of this tax accounted for the bulk of the cut in tax revenues.

The excess of assets over liabilities in general funds was $1,113,954, and in capital funds (counting in the roads, bridges and other structures owned by the State) it was $127,314,335.

Total assets of the State, including the capital structure valued at $171,522,335, were $187,488,631. Total liabilities were $59,060,342.

Gallico

Views With Alarm Intrusion by Girls Into Men's Games

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—You will permit this department, I know, a mild shudder of anticipatory alarm. The ladies and gentlemen in the feature departments have found a little 12-year-old girl out on Long Island who plays football with boys, and they wrote some stories about her which were just too damn cute for words, and pretty good, too, but I am sorry, and worried, and so will they be, too, because now it is only a matter of time before I will begin to receive letters from outraged bands of ladies who will call themselves the Moleskin Girls, or the Powder Puff Panthers, describe themselves as a capable football team able to play anyone any time, and why can't I get them Yale? Or if I can not get them Yale or Notre Dame for a game, why can't I find them another team of ladies against which to play? Yeah, and be quick about it, too.

Teams of lady athletes never seem to be able to take care of themselves. Their captains and managers are always calling me up and wanting me to get them things, preferably male opponents, and they become very indignant and sometimes downright abusive when I indicate that they and their whole clan of big, tough ladies bore me and make me a little ill.

I have seen lady prize fighters, lady wrestlers, lady ball players and up to date have managed to avoid seeing lady football players. But its coming. It won't be long now. The first step has been taken. A little girl football player has been discovered. It is only a matter of time before with a whoop and a holler, her big sisters will organize and descend upon the sports department screaming for recogniiton and space.

And if you do not think that they yell for what they want, you can have an argument with me. I will never forget the lady prize fighter who engaged herself a lawyer to go around with her and help her find people to fight. She wanted a license to fight people, and then she wanted to be provided with people to fight. She was anxious to fight males or females. She was a very quarrelsome lady.

EVENTUALLY if my memories of those long-gone days serves me efficiently, she sued me because I wrote a piece saying I didn't think she was a very good fighter. I had been writing for years, about gentlemen prize fighters, intimating and sometimes declaring forthwith that in the performance of their profession in the ring they were bums, and no one ever threatened to punch me in the nose. But the first time I criticized a lady pugilist, off she rushed to the bailiffs screaming for help.

There was once in this decadent village a terrific rash of lady prize fighters who used to slap one another around in the local dance halls in a sort of sadistic free lunch to attract the patrons. It was a messy and pathetic sight, and none of 'em except one, a little washed-out blonde, who had been taught the rudiments of a jab, could fight a lick. It was all faked any way, and rather a shameful spectacle, and you found yourself sort of taking a shower when you got home in the hopes of getting clean again. They and their manager vanished from the scene eventually, and it has been many years since I have been annoyed with lady pugilists.

In Chicago at the World's Fair there was a boxing booth connected with a German beer garden which served, along with a glimpse of King Levinsky in action (he would also sing for you), a pair of lady wrestlers, who tossed one another around, taking care for the most part to land on that section of their anatomies where it would hurt them least. I did not care for this as entertainment, either—perhaps I am just too squeamish for this new civilization.

I may be a trifle premature, but I just wish to warn any ladies who might find themselves inspired by the little Long Island tomboy who got a bang out of playing football with the kids, and who was pretty good at it, that they need not go about forming lady football teams and expect me to come and look at them, because I won't. I don't think I'm ready for it yet.

I HAVE for a great many years resisted the temptation to watch Maggie Somebody's bloomer girls play baseball, because I want to wait until I am older, stronger and more experienced. Ladies playing one another at football and grinding one another into the mud walls for a little more than I can give as a spectator at present.

I will now receive at least a dozen nasty letters from managers of outfits calling themselves the South Bay Amazons, etc., advising me that women have been playing football for years, and why don't I get wise to myself and come out and see a real football team, and is only dirty politics and jealousy of men that is keeping them out of the Rose Bowl.

I just thought I would sound a note of friendly warning that I don't want to see any lady football players, any where, any time.

Two Oppose Post-Season Contest

Interhigh Champians, Not All-Star Team Will Compete.

International Meeting Won't Set Precedent, Body Declares.

By John R. Vosburgh.

IN THE FACE of opposition of two of its members, the Board of Education yesterday approved the playing of a post-season football game between a picked team of high school players from Mexico City and a representative high school eleven from Washington. It was also decided that the interhigh champions and not an all-high team should meet the Mexicans.

Presumably because the Mexican proposal drew no color line, merely expressing desire to meet "a team representing the Washington (D. C.) high schools," two of the three colored members, Benjamin L. Gaskin and Mrs. Mary A. McNeal, cast disapproving votes. Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, the third colored member, voted for the recommendation, which was made by Supt. of Schools Frank W. Ballou. The game is to be played November 29 at Griffith Stadium.

Henry I. Quinn, broad-shouldered former athlete and the board's commentator par excellence on matters athletic, made it plain that he wanted it definitely understood the Washington team would be the interhigh championship eleven and not an all-high combination. R. L. Maurer, another member, expressed the same opinion and this qualification was included in the final report without discussion to the contrary.

Observers Surprised.

The decision came as a distinct surprise to scholastic observers. It was expected, according to the trend of mind apparent in most high school quarters, that an all-high team representing all the high schools would be the logical choice.

Quinn, however, brought out the point that not only would the interhigh championship team furnish a stronger combination than an all-star eleven, but would also eliminate the puzzling question of selecting an all-high team. The task of picking players from the various teams would be sure to engender bad feeling, it was explained with some school or schools certain to feel itself slighted.

Having played as one unit for an entire season also would qualify a championship team as the best choice to represent Washington, Quinn explained. At this writing, Central and Eastern are tied for the interhigh series lead, each having won two games and lost none.

No Return Game.

The board also made it plain that in approving this game, it in no way sanctions post-season games in general. The approval was granted with the understanding that the contest is not to indicate a return game next year. Because of the international connections with this, the first international high school football game ever played, it was deemed advisable to waive the custom prohibiting post-season games.

The disapproving colored members did not specify whether or not they thought the colored high school champions should meet the white interhigh champs in a playoff for the right to meet the Mexicans.

The board referred the approved recommendation to Dr. Ballou, Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent and Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education department of the schools. To all appearances, Central, should it win the championship, will be asked to cancel its game with Lane High of Charlottesville, Va., on November 28.

Ga. Tech Freshmen Bother Vandy Dean

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 6.—Madison Sarratt, dean of men of Vanderbilt University, said toda ythat he has protested to the dean of men at Georgia Tech in Atlanta "the unsportsmanlike conduct" of Tech freshmen following the football game between the two schools there Saturday.

After the game, which Vanderbilt won, 14 to 13, the Vanderbilt Band, the dean said, started a parade through Atlanta streets.

"Some students undertook to harass and annoy the band," Dean Sarratt declared. "They grabbed the hats off the boys and did other things to disturb them, and two of the players were beaten up."

Gridiron's Best To Face Stern Opposition

Northwestern, Washington to Test Notre Dame and California.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Notre Dame, the people's choice for pigskin pre-eminence as well as the Rose Bowl and the laurel wreath, may need a fresh supply of punts, prayers and passes this Saturday.

No doubt Head Coach Elmer Layden has advised his young men to discard the clippings they have been collecting this week and concentrate on the job of beating Northwestern. The loss of Andy Pilney, Notre Dame's All-Ameria candidate for backfield honors, makes the task no easier. It seems Pilney will return to the football wars by the time the Irish play Army but this will not be so important if Northwestern is not disposed of in the meantime.

It requires imagination, rather than statistics, to suggest Northwestern has a chance to upset Notre Dame this Saturday at South Bend. The Irish should win, any way you figure it, but the Waldcats are in a fine spot to spring one of the year's biggest reversals. Northwestern, under Lynn Waldorf's coaching, has been getting better each Saturday. The team threw a scare into Minesota and licked Illinois in its last two starts. It has nothing to lose and can shoot the works against Notre Dame, whose best teams invariably have found the Wildcats tough to beat.

Huskies to Test California.

The rush to nominate Notre Dame and California for the Rose Bowl may prove to be premature elsewhere. California's unbeaten Bears also are on the spot in their game against Washington's Huskies. Washington was picked early this fall to top the Pacific Coast list, only to be knocked off by Stanford, 6 to 0. The Huskies are not only eager but well equipped to retaliate, at California's expense. They have a great running back in Byron Haines, considered among the three or four best on the West Coast ,and a line likely to give the Bear forwards a eral battle.

Marquette's winning streak may be snapped by Michigan State and Iowa can worry Minnesota, providing the elusive Ozzie Simmons is shaken loose a few times, but the rest of the major unbeaten teams look to be safe for at least another week.

Syracuse expects trouble with Lou Little's Columbia Lions, but Princeton's juggernaut should flatten Harvard. Dartmouth will entertain William and Mary with touchdowns. Texas Christian, one of the Southwest's power-house, outfits displays its stuff in New Orleans this Friday against Loyola. Southern Methodist, another unbeaten and untied headliner, has its first intersectional test on Monday against U. C. L. A.

Loop Leads at Stake.

Conference leaderships are at stake in three other headline pairings this Saturday. Colorado University and Utah battle for the Rocky Mountain title, with the Utes in the favored spot. Mississippi State, which has beaten Alabama and Army this season, hopes to keep up its great record as a "road team" at the expense of Louisiana State. At the moment, L. S. U. is tied with the University of Mississippi for the leadership in the Southeastern Conference. Kansas moves into Nebraska's stronghold to battle for possession of the Big Six pinnacle.

Minnesota, North Carolina, the Southwest and the Pacific Coast will have plenty to offer before any attempt at a final ranking is made.

Michigan Stable Leads as Horse Event Opens in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Frances Dodge, Rochester, Mich., sportswoman showing a powerful string of harness horses led by the unbeaten King of the PPlain, dominated the early classes as the fifty-second National Horse Show opened its seven-day stand in Madison Square Garden this afternoon.

Wtih the ten-year-old mare, Braishfield Debonair, she carried off the honors in the class for novice single harness horses over 14.2 hands. Braishfield Bebonair paired with Potentilla, both newcomers to the garden show, to win the latter event.

Middle West stables also struck early in the other events to take a commanding lead over the other sections of the country in the battle of the blue ribbons. Highland Cora, from A. B. Dick, jr.'s Dickfield Farm, of Gurnee, Ill., took the chief award for novice single harness ponies not exceeding 14.2 hands. George Humphrey, of Mentor, Ohio, turned in the big surprise of the early judging by sending out his 7-year-old green hunter to beat the highly regarded First Knight, owned and exhibited by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, Va.

Genealogy of Far-Flung Key Family Muddles U.C.L.A. Dean

By the Associated Press.

AMARILLO, Tex., Nov. 6.—The investigation into the eligibility of R. F. (Honest I'm Ted) Key, University of California at Los Angeles' bruising fullback, bogged down tonight into a methodical study of the far-flung Key family.

Dean E. R. Miller, of the U. C. L. A. faculty, searched high and low here for persons who could tell him whether the fullback is R. F. (Ted) Key, as he registered at the coast school, or Clois (Shorty) Key, a brother who played for three seasons with the Texas School of Mines at El Paso.

"It looks like we have lost a good fullback if we can't locate some of the missing witnesses," Dean Miller said.

He conferred with R. F. (Ted) Key, of Amarillo, a salesman, and Earl (Ox) Key, former Southern Methodist grid idol, but declined to reveal his findings. Earl insisted the U. C. L. A. fullback is his brother and eligible to play at any college. As for the mysterious Clois (Shorty) Key, he said:

"The last time I heard of him he was playing professional baseball in Mexico.

Earl said, "The R. F. Key living in Amarillo is my cousin, and is the son of R. I. Key, who was at Vernon, Tex., the last time I knew. J. D. Key is my father and the father of the Ted at U. C. L. A."

Dean Miller's investigation of credit ratings showed R. F. Key, of Amarillo, to be the son of J. D. Key and his brother to be E. L. Key, of Dallas.

Miller planned to motor to Panhandle, Tex., to browse through files of the community's high school. It was from this school the U. C. L. A. fullback said he was graduated and presented credentials for his college registration.

At Vernon, Tex., where R. F. (Ted) Key (the Amarillo Key), went to high school with brothers Clois, Earl, Otis and Roy, the superintendent of schools, W. T. Lofland, said he had no record of credits for Ted Key ever being forwarded from his school.

To further thicken the plot, Marshall May, assistant football coach at Vernon when the Keys were high school grid heroes, said he had compared a U. C. L. A. picture with that of his old high school leatherlugger and that "it looks just like Shorty."

At Los Angeles the object of the commotion, the man now known just as the U. C. L. A. fullback, could not be found.

Navy to Play Twice In Baltimore in '36

Yale and Notre Dame Are Scheduled in City.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—Philadelphia and Baltimore each get two of the Navy football games in 1936, according to a schedule announced today by Commander John H. Brown, jr., graduate manager of athletics at the Naval Academy.

The Army-Navy game will be played in hiladelphia November 28, and the Navy-Penn game there October 31.

Baltimore will be the site of the Navy-Yale and Navy-Notre Dame game for November 7.

The Navy will play nine games next season, the same number as were scheduled this fall.

The 1936 schedule follows: September 26, William and Mary, here; October 3, Davidson, here; October 10, Virginia, here; October 17, Yale, at Baltimore; October 24, Princeton, at Princeton; October 31, Penn, at Philadelphia; November 7, Notre Dame, at Baltimore; November 14, Harvard, at Cambridge; November 28, Army, at Philadelphia.

Pilney Not Badly Hurt, May Play This Season

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 6 (AP).—Andy Pilney may be able to play some more football for Notre Dame this season, after all. Examination of his right leg, injured when he galloped to fame in Notre Dame's 18-to-13 victory over Ohio State last Saturday, disclosed today no torn ligaments. The ligaments, however, had been stretched, causing hemorrhages.

Pilney was out of bed, on crutches, and said his injured knee gave him very little pain.

Louis Signs for Bout.

Detroit, Nov. 5 (AP).—James Norris, owner of stadia in Detroit and Chicago, announced tonight that Joe Louis, sensational negro heavyweight, had signed for a fight here during January. Norris said the Brown Bomber's opponent has not been chosen.

Madigan Picks Notre Dame For Bowl

St. Mary's Coach Thinks California Is Best on Coast.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—It is "Slip" Madigan's guess that Notre Dame and California will line up against each other in the next Rose Bowl football classic, January 1.

Madigan, head coach of St. Mary's in California, reached New York today with the latest gridiron gossip from the Far West. His Gaels meet Fordham here Saturday.

"I feel sure California will be the Western team and if it is, it will invite Notre Dame. California has been trying to play Notre Dame for a long time," he said.

Right now the Golden Bears are the only undefeated major eleven on the coast. Madigan doesn't believe it will go through without a reverse, but he says it has the best chance of any of the bigger teams to finish with only one defeat.

Prnceton Is Out.

"That's the game the people out West want to see," he went on. "It wold pack the bowl. Of course, if Notre Dame declines a bid, California would have to find an opponent in the South or Southwest since I understand Princeton is bound by an agreement with Yale not to play post season games.

"California has a fine club. I wouldn't call it a great team and personally I believe Washington will beat it. But California keeps on winning and that's what counts.

"It's a team without individual stars and I have an idea that's one reason behind its success. Stub Allison can always count on eleven better than good players. He has them five deep in spots."

"Slip" thinks Jimmy Phelan's Washington team, although defeated by Stanford, is the coast's strongest eleven.

Madigan nominated Wagner Jorgensen, St. Mary's center, as his all-America candidate.

Handley, Hagerstown In Home-Coming Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 6.—The Handley Judges will meet Hagerstown High School here in the annual home-coming game Saturday afternoon. The crack Handley band will be on hand to enliven what may, from the locals' standpoint, prove a "crucial" game in that a victory will give them a chance for a triple tie for first place in the Cumberland Valley League.

Hagerstown has defeated Cumberland, 34-7. Cumberland defeated Waynesboro, 20-19, and Handley, 27-7. A victory for the locals over the Hagerstown eleven would put all the teams on an equal footing.

Favorites Top Rock Creek Tourney

Altrock and Burnett Win in First Round of Turkey Golf.

Yoder Has Easy Time in Beating Strohm by 5 and 4.

By Dave Herman.

TWO favorites, Volney Burnett, Indian Spring ace, and Nick Altrock, 1933 champion, were given stiff battles yesterday before they emerged victorious in the opening round of match play in the Rock Creek turkey golf tournament.

Burnett, champion of his club, had the time of his life eliminating big Ed Burns, Rock Creek course manager, 2 and 1, while Altrock, whose 71 paced the field in the medal round, was forced to chip and putt in his best form on the back nine before closing out young Russ Sullivan, St. John's student, 3 and 2.

Levi Yoder, who appears to be the man to beat for the championship, won as he pleased from A. R. Strohm, 5 and 4. The Indian Spring golfer was even par for the 14 holes.

Wilhelm Beaten.

Jack Crook, late of Cincinnati, took Bill Wilhelm, 3 and 2, and W. H. Miller put out Ernie Garlem, 4 and 3.

Three first-round matches remain to be played in the first flight. Bob Marks will face T. Gibraski, Ben Kong, Hawaiian champion, takes on Charlie Beall, former Randolph-Macon athlete, and L. D. Byers will oppose J. L. Armstead.

Burnett had reason to fear for his laurels in his match with Burns. The bespectacled manager, matching the firemen, shot for shot, held him even for eight holes. Then Burnett plopped in a birdie three on the ninth to go one up.

Burns caught him, and they went to the sixteenth all even. Here Burns three-putted, losing to Burnett's par four. Burnett ended the match on the short seventeenth with a three to Burns' four.

Out in 33, one under to Burns' 34, Burnett shot the 17 holes in two over par.

Sullivan held a 1-up lead on Comedian Altrock at the turn, but saw it quickly melt in the face of Altrock's steady fire on the stretch.

Results:

First Flight.

Nick Altrock defeated Russ Sullivan, 3 and 2; W. H. Miller defeated Ernie Garlem, 4 and 3; Levi Yoder defeated A. R. Strohm, 5 and 4; Volney Burnett defeated Ed Burns, 2 and 1; Jack Crook defeated Bill Wilhelm, 3 and 2.

Second Flight.

Jack Sinclair defeated W. E. Gemmell, 1 up, 20 holes; G. H. Seitz defeated Joe Rodgers, 1 up; G. H. Richardson defeated H. J. Leach, 5 and 4.

Third Flight.

C. L. Wolford defeated J. Tartaglia, 5 and 4; R. H. Kirchmyer defeated J. P. Staunton, 2 up; L. D. Abrams defeated W. H. Holden, 3 up.

Fourth Flight.

Anthony Del Vecchio defeated T. Fahs, 3 and 2; J. S. Walsmith defeated H. O. Hefner, 1 up.

Women's Flight.

Mrs. Hope Wilkerson defeated Verna Hord 9 and 7.

Four Teams in Race Fieldball Championship

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 6.—In the scholastic football campaign, the race for sectional honors has narrowed down to four teams—Penn Avenue, Allegany, Parsons and Hagerstown.

Five clubs have records showing five wins. They are Penn, LaSalle, Parsons, Allegany and Petersburg. Allegany has dropped two contests, while the rest have lost but one.

A victory for Penn over Parsons Saturday will eliminate the West Virginia club, while a Parsons victory will keep the Kepnermen very much in the picture.

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges

Auburn—Its All-Time Honor Roll

College Rise on Gridiron Dates From 1913 and Boozer Pitts.

By George Trevor,
Nationally Known Football Authority.

HEADING the list of Auburn greats is a name that smacks of the old order of cave man football, when men were men. You cannot picture in your mind a player called Boozer Pitts saving himself for the Junior Prom. No drug store cowboy here! And Pitts at center was just as swashbuckling as his name implied.

Auburn's rise to football fame dates from the Pitts era. Just cast your eye down the honor list and you will find seven stars who figured on the undefeated and untied team of 1913. Boozer Pitts was a mathematical genius on the gridiron or in the class room. Twice he was called back as head coach in an effort to solve the Plainsmen's football problem. You guessed it—he is a mathemathics professor there now!

To Moon Ducote, present coach at Loyola, New Orleans, goes the title of best all-around back in the Orange and Blue's history. He tore opposing lines apart, though not favored by brilliant support.

Under Chet Wynne in 1932 Auburn reached the top of the Southern heap. That was the year trigger-minded Jimmy Hitchcock, All-American halfback, while carrying the ball on an end run would point out to his mates what foes he wished "taken out." You can find him these days on the baseball diamond of the Newark Bears.

"Boots" Chambless had no peer in whipping out of his guard position to block for the backs. "Big" Thigpen, "Tubby" Lockwood and "Fats" Lawrence were man-mountains. Appropriately enough the latter now works for the Hercules Powder Co.

was the situation. The new placing was soon displayed naming Malbrouk, Brindle and Apprentice as the "money" horses. Scotch Bun was a lukewarm avorite and Malbrouk paid a $17.40 mutuel.

Daily-double stock rose abruptly for the day. Those who played the combination of Light and Treford were rewarded with a $99.50 mutuel.

Light, owned by Capt. P. M. Walker, won the first race at a $17.70 mutuel. The daughter of Dunlin was slow to break, but Jockey Bobby Merritt rushed her to the front going to the far turn and there was none to dislodge her. Trujillo was second and Aura third in the field of 12.

Treford Wins Eeasily.

Wise Sister, carying the light weight of 102 pounds, scored a surrace, coming from behind to defeat, prise victory in the second sprint among others, Western Lad and Orinoco. The winning daughter of Wise Counselor paid a $46 mutuel and was capably ridden by the apprentice, J. Dunbar. Western Lad lost the decision by a head and was the only one of several well-played horses that made a good showing.

Treford proved much the best in the third race, being rushed into a commanding lead at the start to fairly coast the remaining distance and win as his rider pleased, which happened to be four lengths. Jockey Rosengarten did the booting. Indian News, thanks to some late running, was second and Merely was third. Treford, trained by Selby Burch, of Washington, was a favorite at a $4.50 mutuel.

Miss Dignity was in front all the way in the sixth race while in the role of a $5.20 favorite. She took the purse by a margin of a half length from Alit, a long shot. Third money went to Still Alarm.

The final went to Naval Cadet, a $6.30 favorite.

a hard man to "block out" give them the edge for tackles, but Fred McCollum, with his play-diagnosing smartness, is close up.

How Gump Ariail could cover punts! He pulled in passes with the easy grace of a Tris Speaker. Now a captain in the United States Army, Robbie Robinson was a wizard at boxing the tackles. Fenton, a fierce tackler, and Grant, brainy as they come, complete the ends.

Weighing but 145, that "jack-in-the-box" quarterback Kirk Newell was as elusive as an eel and as shifty as a toe dancer. Shirey and Shirling were ball carriers hard to upset. Lew Hardage, well known as a coach, was the fiery type possessed of a wealth of football lore.

Paul Bidez was as tough as the steel he now experiments with in the State's chemistry laboratory at Auburn. Let's conclude with Willis Phipps, the climax runner. Long scoring dashes were his forte.

King Coach Is Wary Of Roanoke Attack

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Nov. 6.—King College players blocked and tackled their way through a long and rough workout yesterday, topped off with a short scrimmage, as they began preparations for Friday night's important "home coming" duel with Roanoke.

Coach "Bo" Brown has not been able to scout Roanoke and consequently is drilling his players to be on the lookout for everything, particularly the Roanoke power plays built around smashing Herman Smith, a Bristol boy.

Tornado prospects are somewhat brighter due to the fact that Tony Savage, center, will be ready for duty against the Maroons, and there is also a possibility that Capt. Con Davis will be able to see a bit of action for the first time since the opening clash with Tennessee Wesleyan, in which he cracked a shoulder.

Injuries Slow Wasps For Oglethorpe Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., Nov. 6.—Undaunted by the defeat handed them by a strong Marshall College eleven at Bluefield last week, the Emory and Henry Wasps are hard at work this week in preparation for Oglethorpe University of Georgia, to be encountered Saturday at Big Stone Gap.

Minus two of the first team luminaries, Karl Reedy, suffering with a head injury, and Major Barker, out with an injured hip, the Wasps have been weakened considerably.

Yesterday's practice session stressed a defense against a double wing back formation that is used effectively by the Georgians, and some punt protection for Alderson Propps, who had four kicks blocked in the last two games.

Charles Town to Play.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Instead of an open date, as listed on its schedule, Charles Town High School eleven will meet Front Royal (Va.) High on its home field here Friday. Next week the locals will meet Shepherdstown on the field here.

LIGHT went up fast midway of the back stretch, moved into the lead rounding the turn, then, holding on strongly for the closing drive, outstayed TRUJILLO. Latter, close up from the beginning, saved ground entering the home stretch and continued strongly until the finish. AURA went forwardly placed and came with good energy in the final issue. MAJOR M. had good speed while racing prominently, but weakened during the closing furlong. CHAMBERSBURGER, shuffled back soon after the start, finished willingly when clear. LETS PRETEND was going gamely at the end. REIGH TETRARCH weakened steadily. The others could not reach contention.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:04. Off at 2:05. Winner, J. A. Belk's ch. f. WISE SISTER, kept under strong ursing in the early stages, moved up fast entering the home stretch, gained a brief lead in the closing furlong and barely lasted long enough. WESTERN LAD, a keen factor from the beginning, raced RED BADGE to defeat and fought it out stoutly all during the final drive. ORINOCO worked his way up on the outside and closed with good courage. RED BADGE began quickly, but failed to rally under a stiff drive. CHIRAC could not make up any ground during the stretch run. WAR SAINT raced strongly for the first five furlongs, then weakened. SAM WORTHY showed a good effort. VENETIAN lacked speed and was steered wide for the entire trip. LITTLE ARGO was never a factor.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:33. Off at 2:36. Winner, T. H. Somerville's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TREFORD, $4.50, $3.80, $2.90; INDIAN NEWS, $8.80, $4.00; MERELY, $2.70.

TREFORD sprinted into an easy lead going to the first turn, was rated until reaching the home stretch, then came out with effort nearing the finish. INDIAN NEWS improved her position on the outside and closed gamely. MERELY was kept within striking distance of the pacemaker, but failed to rally when asked. CREDULOUS was permitted to race on his own courage early, then failed to respond when put to punishment. TEMPO went well for six furlongs, then tired. TOLIMATA was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03½. Winner, Breckinridge Long's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGUME, $8.40, $4.90, $3.10; HINDU QUEEN, $7.60, $4.20; CHATMOSS, $3.10.

LEGUME broke fast and outran his field to the first turn, stalled off stiff contention from CHATMOSS in the first six furlongs, met a determined effort from CHATMOSS and barely lasted to withstand HINDU QUEEN. Latter, reserved early, rained fast in the last five-sixteenths and was wearing the winner down at every stride nearing the finish. CHATMOSS moved up menacingly midway of the final furlong, but weakened after getting on almost even terms with the winner in the last furlong. KIEVER was unable to make up any ground during the stretch drive. SILENT SHOT had no excuses. BIOGRAPHY stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:34½. Winner, R. S. Clark's ch. c. (3), by Blenheim—Oratrix. Trained by M. Hirsch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:39 2-5, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MALBROUK, $17.40, $8.20, $5.10; BRINDLE, $10.50, $7.20; APPRENTICE, $4.40.

SCOTCH BUN, strongly restrained back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, gained fast when put to a drive, crowded MALBROUK into the fence in the final furlong pole when making a determined challenge and drew out in the last sixteenth. He was disqualified for foul. MALBROUK displaced THORSON midway of the back stretch, saved ground and was going gamely until impeded. BRINDLE, very sluggish in the first six furlongs, moved into contention with a rush in the last five-sixteenths and closed strongly after coming wide. APPRENTICE showed a good effort. THORSON weakened after six furlongs. ROUGH DIAMOND failed to threaten when placed to severe pressure. FLAMING MAMIE was held safe.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:09. Winner, J. M. Reuter's b. f. (3), by Sun Edwin—Fairfriesend. Trained by R. J. Reuter. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:40 2-5, 1:43 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS DIGNITY, $5.20, $3.80, $2.90; ALIT, $10.40, $4.70; STILL ALARM, $3.30.

MISS DIGNITY, taken in hand after reaching the back stretch, withstood a strong effort from CHIEF YEOMAN when leaving the back stretch, responded nicely to punishment in the closing furlong and outstayed ALIT under a hard drive. ALIT went prominently from the beginning and came courageously under a strong ride nearing the end. STILL ALARM, slow to settle in her stride, improved her position on the outside and made up ground steadily. CHIEF YEOMAN made a bold bid leaving the back stretch, but weakened in the closing furlong. TIME PIECE secured racing room on the inside at the half-mile mark, but was not good enough. SWAMP ANGEL raced up on horses' heels and could not find racing room in the last three furlongs. PUMICE STONE weakened early. JACK FATCHES showed a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:38½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAVAL CADET, $6.30, $3.90, $2.80; FLUFFY LEE, $4.50, $3.30; FAIRLY WILD, $4.40.

NAVAL CADET, shaken up early in the running, moved into a contending position midway of the back stretch, circled his field to wear the leaders down and came out right at the end. FLUFFY LEE, rated for the first seven furlongs, took a slight lead midway of the last curve, saved ground, but could not resist the winner. FAIRLY WILD stayed ground until reaching the home stretch, then came to the outside for the final drive. SILENCE III closed a good run. BEHEMOTH, under restraint early, weakened badly when forced to a drive. GAY SYMPATHY was done after six furlongs.

Steel Demand Expands While Output Drops

Output Declines 1 Per Cent, but Large Orders Are in Sight.

New York, Nov. 6.—Steel ingot output has declined from 53½ to 52½ per cent of capacity, but the recession cannot be considered significant in view of accumulating evidences of expanding demand, Iron Age says in its weekly review today.

Automobile production of more than 300,000 units is said to be assured for both November and December. Construction, with the rapid maturing of numerous WPA and other Government-sponsored projects, will soon take increased tonnages of iron and steel. The railroads, following recent gains in carloadings, are hastening to make needed but long deferred expenditures for rolling stock and maintenance of way.

Aside from indications of expanding steel consumption by the heavy industries, the prospect of price increases is likely to stimulate buying between now and January 1. A large Pittsburgh producer has advanced rerolling billets, slabs and blooms to $29 and sheet bars to $30, an increase of $2 a ton, and an advance of $1 a ton on finished steel is expected to follow.

Markets Irregular.

The market has not been entirely free from price irregularities; reinforcing bar prices are still unsettled, particularly in the New York district, and only recently there was a reversion to the precode practice of granting sizable concessions on bars and sheets to larger buyers in the Detroit area. But higher costs of primary materials, including fuel, pig iron and fluorspar, and the possibility that rising living costs may soon dictate an advance in mill-wage rates have forced the logic of an upward revision of steel prices even on producers, who, until lately, have opposed such a move.

Additional advances in pig iron prices have raised the Iron Age composite to $18.84 a ton, or $1 a ton above the level of two weeks ago before the initial increases were announced.

Ford has bought 20,000 tons of sheets and will probably make further purchases in the coming week. The Louisville & Nashville has ordered 20,000 tons of rails from the Ensley mill, and close to 40,000 tons of new rail business is in prospect in the Chicago district. The Pennsylvania has definitely decided to go ahead with a program calling for 10,000 freight cars, 100 locomotives and the reconstruction of 1,000 cars. This line will also resume electrification work. The Milwaukee road contemplates the purchase of 15 locomotives.

N. Y. Utility Files $25,000,000 Issue

The New York and Queens Electric Light & Power Co. has filed a registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering $25,000,000 first and consolidating mortgage bonds, 3½ per cent series of 1935, due November 1, 1965. Proceeds will be used to retire outstanding debentures and notes and to increase working capital.

The International Cement Corporation has filed a registration for $12,000,000 of 10-year convertible debentures, due November 1, 1945, with 342,858 shares of no par value common stock and common stock scrip equivalent to 12,000 shares. The common stock is reserved for conversion of the debentures and the scrip for fractional lots. The interest rate on the debentures will be announced later. The proceeds will be applied to the retirement of the company's 5 per cent gold debentures due May 1, 1948.

Kreuger Creditors Get Match Dividend

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Irving Trust Co. applied today for permission to distribute an initial dividend of 5 per cent to creditors of the International Match Corporation, one of the principal units of the Ivar Kreuger group. The dividend will amount to about $5,000,000.

Oscar W. Ehrhorn, Federal referee in bankruptcy, took the application under advisement to permit objectors a hearing.

The Ticker Tape

Stocks Buoyant in Three-Million Share Session; Bonds Active and Higher.

By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 6.—Whether carried along by the election tides or lifted on a wave of better feeling generally, stock markets opened strong, went through some profit taking in the middle of the day, and closed with a rush of activity and an all-round advance in prices that brought numerous new high quotations for the year or longer. Motor shares set the pace at first, but later the steels, building and even railroad stocks came forward briskly.

Closing prices were near the tops, with some gains of 5 points or more. The turnover was the first of 3,000,000 shares since July 26 of last year, and it was the largest for a rising market since February of a year ago. Trading also was over the broadest list seen in a long time. The Sun's industrial price index closed at the highest point since 1931. Bonds also were strong. December wheat closed at 97¾, a rise of ⅜ of a cent a bushel.

Security markets on reopening were under two sets of influences, the force of which was difficult to measure. Stock buying goes in waves, and this seemed to be a day when prices were due to be carried higher. The example was set in the London market yesterday, which chose that time to grow enthusiastic over the General Motors and other favorable dividend action on this side. As much as anything else, the market here was catching up with the holiday. Aside from higher dividends, the news confirmed rumors of a lift in finished steel prices, and reports from the motor show encouraged a fresh flow of money into the minor stocks. The day in stocks probably would have been a fair one without aid or hindrance of an election.

In the financial district approval of the trend shown by the voting, particularly in New York State, was general, but the results were regarded with restraint. It was recognized that no tremendous upset had occurred, although perhaps none had been expected. What was done at least suggested a better chance for overturning the New Deal than had seemed likely a few months ago, but while the evidence was favorable the case has not been proved.

Revulsion.

Even a start in revulsion against New Deal politics and economics is highly encouraging. So far a large mass of voters have seen only the rosy side of the matter—namely, ample relief and bonus checks and a fair recovery in business from the depths, belated though it has been. They have yet to find that in long run the money they have obtained so easily from the Government and spent so freely will have to come, in one way or another, out of their own property, income or toil. Naturally, the New Dealers will do all they can to prevent that discovery between now and next November.

Foreign exchange traders watched with interest as the guilder climbed in Paris close to the level at which Holland would draw gold from France, adding another country to those draining reserves from the French. In relation to dollars the guilder is now far above the level at which gold could be shipped here, yet it is also far below the level at which Holland could hope to draw any metal from this country. The franc remained below the gold shipping point all day, with further gold engagements in Paris in consequence, but 90-day franc futures, which fell to 16½ points discount on Monday, improved to a discount of only 13¾ ponts. Chinese currency — the Shanghai dollar, was undisturbed at its managed price.

New high prices were set by representatives of nearly every stock group. Some of the specialties were not able to get anywhere, but others, recently neglected, came forward with a rush. Moderate strength in the motors, steels and other leaders probably would have left other shares irregular, but the spectacle of 2, 3 and 4 point gains in standard issues was too much for many speculative and even investment minds.

Broad Gains.

Among the more jubilant of the days' gainers—stocks rising 2 to 5 points or better—were General Motors, du Pont, Johns-Manville, Greyhound, Columbian, Carbon, Air Reduction, Chrysler and Steel. Buoyancy returned to some of the lowly issues. Favorites were Budd Wheel, American Radiator, Newport Industries, Otis Steel and Timken.

Oil shares held their clientele and added to it. Most strength was shown by Amerada, Barnsdell, Pure and Philips.

Tax Retrievers Bag 2.5 Million In Ten Weeks

Treasury Collections Equal Cost of Work for a Year.

In the first ten weeks of the miscellaneous tax project, collections and assessments of delinquent taxes have amounted to more than the total amount of money allocated for the entire project for a year, according to a Treasury statement yesterday. A Works Progress Administration allotment of $2,448,290.80 was made for the project, which was inaugurated during August.

A report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau shows that in the period ending October 25 the total expenditure was $363,033.30, covering salaries, rent and miscellaneous expense. Total collections and assessments for the same period were $2,542,122.13, or approximately seven times the cost.

The miscellaneous tax investigation is being carried on in 22 internal revenue collection districts, comprising 20 metropolitan areas. Intensive inspections are being made of the books of furriers, manufacturing jewelers, sporting goods manufacturers, cosmetics manufacturers and enterprises subject to taxes on admissions and dues. About 1,800 relief workers are being used, under supervision of permanent employes of the internal revenue service.

A total of $19,874.48 has been collected in Washington.

5 and 10 Chains Return Profits As Costs Rise

Net of 4.86% With 31.9% Expense Reported by Harvard Survey.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6.—Limited price variety chains made substantial profits in 1934 in spite of a sharp increase in operating expenses, according to a report released today by the bureau of business research of the Harvard Business School. This report, financed by the Limited Price Variety Stores Association, is one of a series devoted to chain store margins, expenses and profits. These data for variety chains are now available for 1929 and subsequent years, with the exception of 1930.

The 1934 study is based on the operations of 30 chains which made aggregate net sales of more than $722,000,000 in 4,902 stores. These chains are believed to have secured more than 85 per cent of the total variety chain volume in the United States in 1934. The gross margin, or the difference between sales and the cost of the merchandise sold, in the aggregate was approximately $265,000,000, or just under 37 cents of the sales dollar. Out of this sum the 30 chains met expenses of $230,000,000, or 31.9 cents of the sales dollar, and secured a net operating profit of $35,000,000, or 4.86 cents of the sales dollar. Net profit, including nonmerchandising income, amounted to 15.19 per cent on the aggregate net worth.

Sales per store declined nearly one-quarter between 1929 and 1934, but there was not a proportionate decrease in most items of expense. Salaries and wages per store were reduced only from $28,848 to $23,956, or 16.96 per cent, while tenancy costs per store fell but 6.39 per cent. The only expense item showing a substantial increase was taxes. Taxes per store rose from $605 to $1,360, or 124.79 per cent.

Carnegie-Illinois Lifts Steel Price $2

Pittsburgh, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation notified purchasers today of a $2 increase in the price of semi-finished steel, quoting rerolling blooms, slabs and billets at $29 and sheet bars at $30. The rest of the industry is expected to follow this move by the largest of the United States Steel Corporation's subsidiaries.

Steel men said the increasing cost of raw materials was responsible for the rise which will be passed on in the prices of finished material. They estimated the move will add more than $50,000,000 to the industry's income in 1936.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Inland Steel Co. today announced price advances on three semi-finished products, effective immediately on new sales. The changes were: Rerolling quality billets, from $27 to $29 per gross ton; sheet bars, from $28 to $30 per gross ton, and skelp, from $1.70 per hundredweight to $1.80.

Ethiopian War Is Reflected In Toy Designs

Tin Soldiers, Latest Model Tractors and Guns Copy Equipment.

By the United Press.

Chicago.—While the world at large is gravely concerned by the African war, the toy world finds in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis only inspiration for new and gaudier types of tin soldiers, new and more realistic sinews of pplayroom "war" with which to greet the 1935 Christmas season.

Despite its short duration, the conflict between Mussolini's trim legions and Haile Selassie's ragged warriors is influencing the American Christmas toy market. On toy counters throughout the land, in the tin soldier section, the most prominent position is being given to those figures cast in the Algerian or Foreign Legion mode, because they are most suggestive of the flowing-robed Ethiopians.

And within a few weeks, say toy style forecasters in the Merchandise Mart here, manufacturers will catch up with current history by producing figures even more faithfully copying the fighting equipment and regalia being used in East Africa.

Tractors Mount Guns.

Meantime, the rubber-belted caterpillar tractor, an overwhelming favorite a few Christmases ago in a peaceful agricultural role is staging a comeback this year in warlike pattern with a pair of fire-spitting machine guns on either side.

Metal casting sets, growing in popularity each year, also will reflect the military note with greater emphasis than ever this season, judging from previews of what the holiday season will offer. Tiny fighting airplanes will help youngsters, so inclined, to fight "from the air" their battles on what Robert Louis Stevenson called "the pleasant land of counterpane."

Aside from the military motif, and possibly running abreast with it streamlining is the keynote of Toyland, 1935.

New Trains Popular.

With most of the Nation's leading railroads having at least one superspeed, air-cleaving new creation, the quickly imitative toy world has copied them all with amazing faithfulness and manufacturers estimate that probably 80 per cent of toy trains sold this Christmas will be in the streamline pattern.

Toy autos, velocipedes, scooters, coaster wagons, every sort of vehicular toy down to beginners' roller skates, will be dominated by the tear-drop, snub-nosed, flowing line features the modern world knows as streamlining.

For girls, this Christmas will see a host of playthings reflecting not only current trends in the world of grown-up women, but also the highlights of contemporary affairs. In the doll sections, life-like and life-size images of Shirley Temple will bid for a place under the Christmas tree.

Dionnes Are Inspiration.

And departing from the usual lure of doll babies en solo, nests of appealing babies—faithful copies of the Dionne quintuplets—will thrill girls. A true-to-life touch is being given some of the new models which manifest an ability literally to partake of milk and water via the toy nursing bottle.

Play furniture for small housekeepers has gone modern, too. Modern maple, so popular in grown-up furniture styles, promises to be equally strong in playroom breakfast nooks, desks and tea sets.

Educational and construction toys continue their advancement and refinement. Chemical, mineralogy, microscope sets and much-improved toy electric moving picture projectors embrace fields which, a decade ago, were considered far outside the realm of playthings and now are leaders.

Cuba Is Speeding Auto Safety Laws

Action Is Spurred by Increasing Death Toll.

Havana (U.P.).—Increases in traffic accident fatalities are spurring government officials to action in the consideration of laws for the protection of travelers.

Statistics made public by Communications Secretary Francisco Gomez show that on the Central Highway between October 5, 1934, and May 31, 1935, 130 accidents were responsible for 28 dead and 274 injured, not including the death of 14 in a collision between an autobus and a train near Coliseo, in Matanzas Province.

These figures are compared with the period of December 20, 1932, to December 31, 1933, when 14 were killed and 109 injured in 79 accidents

New laws proposed by Gomez include the establishment of penal and financial penalties to be imposed on those found responsible for the accidents; second, the establishment of a system of adequate indemnities to injured persons or the heirs of those killed, and third, provisions obligating companies running autobuses and other public vehicles to use only absolutely safe vehicles operated by "capable and conscientious personnel."

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

ONE OF the strangest battles of the Revolutionary War was the all-night fight between a French man o'war and a barren, defenseless island in the West Indies. The island, called Sail Rock, is strikingly similar in appearance to a full rigged sailing ship.

It was sighted one night by a French frigate. The captain hailed the other "vessel," and getting no reply, decided that it was an English warship. He ordered a broadside. This tumult of firing, ricocheting shells, echoing and splashing, led the French captain to believe that his fire had been returned. He ordered continuous bombardment—and all night long the French gun crews poured a deadly hail of shot and shell into the "enemy." At dawn they realized they had been fighting with a huge rock all night.

Queen Anne of England offered the first prizes for horse races when, in 1703, she donated a silver plate worth $20,000 for the Doncaster race winner. This continued, with prizes of increasing value, until in 1714 the queen put up a gold cup—and insisted that every owner who entered a horse put up ten guineas ($50.00) winner take all. This was the first race for money on this basis—and the queen's own horse Star won the race.

Under a new Michigan State law, sponsored by Auditor General John J. O'Hara, you have to pay for your own keep when you are in a State prison. Court action may be taken against any property owned by a prisoner to enforce this collection. The law has been tested in Circuit Court already and found constitutional and collections under it have been made.

Red Cross Sends Funds To Cuba and Honduras

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, yesterday announced that cash contributions to aid the hurricane sufferers in Cuba and Honduras had been turned over to the State Department and that a shipment of foodstuffs had been sent storm victims in Nicaragua.

The State Department will send $2,500 to the Cuban Red Cross and $1,000 to the American minister in Honduras, Admiral Grayson said.

Food supplies sent to the Cape Gracias committee of the Nicaraguan Red Cross are being transported through the courtesy of the Standard Fruit & Steamship Co. out of New Orleans.

Peggy! Haven't seen you for so long. Think of you so often... look perfectly charming.
George dear, please don't push right in front of Mr...
I just wanted to ask about the pocketbook.
Yes, a fellow called up from some doctor's office. Told me to come here and....
George! Peggy! Now I remember. That wounded man...told us to notify someone named Montgomery. Remember?
Wait...oh yes. But I didn't connect that with Mr...
Neither did I...until now. Oh how things turn out. Let me show you the pocketbook, Mr. Eldorado.
Peggy and I tried to make out the name. It's Borado or...
Borado? Well that's...why what's this...my brother's signature? Morton Dorado! He always left the El off.
Yes, yes, it is!
